Filibuster in Senate Delays End of Session

Minority Yields After Fighting Code Bill Passage

INTERIM GROUP
Committee to Propose Tax Legislation at Special Term

Madison—(AP)—With a final dramatic flare marked by filibustering and disorder in the senate, the legislative session swept past the noon hour in its drive toward the end of the 1939 session by 4 o'clock this afternoon.

Seven senators organized a stubborn but futile fight against a proposed code law for barbers, cosmeticians, cleaners and shoe repairers, and finally gave up after conferences in which both houses reached an agreement.

The senate approved the code law and the bill re-enacting the state milk control law, which was due to expire Dec. 31. By concurring in house amendments it sent these measures to Governor Heil.

Through conference action the senate brought up for a vote a new driver's license law which the assembly re-drafted and passed this morning under leadership of Speaker Thomson (R) Richland Center. Strong opposition developed in Progressive ranks, however, and the fate of the bill became uncertain.

Interim Tax Group
Another measure on the agreed list provided for creation of an interim committee of 15 members, 5 from each party, to draw up a general tax program for submission to a special session which Governor Heil intends to call.

In a hopeless deadlock over taxation, the regular session planned to adjourn leaving the state budget $21,000,000 out of balance.

The interim committee was to have $2,000 for expenses.

The new driver's license law would require all motorists to renew present licenses at a fee of 25 cents effective next Jan. 1 and every three years thereafter. Beginners would be subject to examination.

The senate had not anticipated any breach in the original plan to quit at noon when it met at 9 a. m. it promptly put through a resolution fixing adjournment at that hour and asked the house to concur.

A preliminary lineup showed 20 to 7 in favor of the service trade code bill, but Senator Peters took the floor and started talking against it. When he reached the assembly that both the code and milk control bills were endangered. The house refused to adopt an adjournment resolution until they were passed.

Supporting Peters were five other Republicans, Coakley of Beloit, Miller of Muscoda, Collier of Neenah and Roethe of Fennimore, and Senator McDermid of Ladysmith, a Progressive.

Lieutenant Governor Goodland called spokesmen for both sides into conference to break the jam and Coakley returned later asking that the senate remain informal until an agreement could be reached.

Loud objections were voiced by Senator Bolens (D) Port Washington, who declared the majority was turning to page 12 col. 5.

Phil Urges Nation to Keep Out of Conflict

Stevens Point—(AP)—America should stay out of the European war, former Governor Philip F. LaFollette told more than 1,000 persons attending a full jamboree of the Portage county Izank Walton league chapter here last night.

Reviewing conservation progress in Wisconsin, he then discussed conservation in broader terms as it applies to human lives and criticized those who he said advocated that America should enter the war to defeat Germany or help France.

"America should concentrate its attention on the things that will promote the welfare of her own people," LaFollette asserted.

DEFENDS BILL

The administration's neutrality bill can give no nation cause for complaint, Senator Thomas (D-Utah) one of the authors of the embargo repeal legislation, declared today in the senate. He contended that one bill would not be contrary to international law.

Michigan Union Offers Sympathy Strike at Kenosha

Delegation Promises Walkout if Nash-Kelvinator Group Wants It

Kenosha—(AP)—Pledge of a sympathy strike at the Nash-Kelvinator Corporation's main plant in Michigan was offered today by a union delegation from Grand Rapids during a conference with leaders of the striking United Automobile Workers (CIO) union.

The Michigan U. A. W. delegation said it would call a sympathy walkout if the Kenosha union wished. The latter did not immediately make public its desire concerning the offer.

Conferences were resumed again today by spokesmen for the local union and company officials in an effort to settle the five-day-old Nash motors strike.

An all-day session was held yesterday. At its adjournment, neither group of conferees had anything to report as to whether progress had been made.

Strike Started Sunday
The strike began last Sunday, called by the United Automobile Workers (CIO) union in the hope of forcing adoption of proposals for a signed contract affecting working conditions.

Both the Kenosha plant and the Seaman Body Works in Milwaukee, units of Nash-Kelvinator Corporation, are idle. The shutdowns affected 6,100 workers.

Charges Reds Try To Control Labor

Legion Chief Thinks Communists Obstacles to Industrial Peace

Cincinnati, Ohio—(AP)—Raymond J. Kelly, National commander of the American Legion, told the American Federation of Labor convention today that "communism-inspired cliques" were seeking control of the labor movement and had made industrial peace almost impossible to achieve.

In his first speech since his election to the top position last week, Kelly pointed to disclosures before the Dies committee purporting to describe communist activities in labor ranks, and added:

"Those who would implant foreign revolutionary doctrines in the ranks of honest and law-abiding workmen must be trampled until they can never rise again."

Kelly declared peaceful employer-employee relations in this country were more imperative than ever before to convince foreign nations the time was ripe to take advantage "of what they might believe to be a strife-torn America."

The legion commander hailed the federation and the World War veterans organization as "the foremost stabilizing influences in the United States today," and said the A. F. of L. had succeeded "to a high degree" in keeping its organization as a "repository for pure Americanism."

Youth Is Arrested on Charge of Extortion

New York—(AP)—A 20-year-old youth who, Don Meade, nationally known jockey, said had threatened to kidnap Meade's seven-week-old adopted son was held today on an extortion charge.

The prisoner, booked as Carlo Zarcone, was seized by detectives last night when Meade handed him a dummy package, supposedly containing $4,000, at a pre-arranged meeting place.

Arms Embargo Must Remain, Group Insists

Dozen Opponents of Bill Offer to Support Revised Legislation

THOMAS BACKS PLAN

Utah Senator Says Repeal Would Give No Cause For Complaint

Washington—(AP)—A dozen senate opponents offered today to accept revised neutrality legislation which would retain the arms embargo now in effect and set up a requirement for cash payments on belligerents' purchases.

Sensor Borah (R-Idaho) said the group concurred in the following formal statement:

"We are still willing, as has been our position from the first, to accept the administration bill if the administration will leave in the law the embargo on arms, ammunition and implements of war and provide for cash instead of credit on other commodities.

"But we will not yield to the repeal of the arms embargo and it is not necessary if neutrality is the sole object."

Borah said those agreeing to the statement were Senators Johnson (R-Calif.), Downey (D-Calif.), Danaher (R-Conn.), Overton (D-La.), Bulow (D-S. D.), LaFollette (R-Wis.), Vandenberg (R-Mich.), McCarran (D-Nev.), Nye (R-N. D.), McPherson (D-Minn.) and Holt (D-W. Va.).

Borah said the statement was issued simply for the purpose of trying to make it plain that our fight is against repeal of the arms embargo.

Sensor Thomas (D-Utah) declared today that no nation could complain against repeal of the arms embargo, because the administration neutrality bill would prevent American ships from carrying war supplies to a belligerent.

Predicts Inflation
Senator Downey (D-Calif.) forecast in the senate today that repeal of the arms embargo would lead ultimately to "inflation and a boom of catastrophic consequences."

The Californian took the floor after Senator Thomas (D-Utah) had urged removal of the embargo. Thomas contended that no nation could object because under the administration's full neutrality bill American ships would be prevented from carrying war supplies.

Two States Hunt For Three Robbers

Bandits Seize $300 in Raid on Branch Bank At Saronia

Shell Lake, Wis.—(AP)—Minnesota and Wisconsin authorities joined today in a hunt for three court-courts, well-dressed men who invaded the Shell Lake State bank branch at Saronia and escaped with $300.

The trio entered the branch late yesterday, held up a customer and the manager, left their bound victims in the vault with coin sacks as pillows, and fled. Saronia is nine miles southeast of Shell Lake.

Sheriff Robert Willis of Washburn county said the trio used a coach with a Minnesota license. No one noted the license number.

J. B. Ebel, a farmer, manager at Leon Bailey, a farmer, were in the bank when the three unmasked men entered. Willis said. The leader covered the two with a pistol.

After binding Beardsley and Bailey and placing them in the vault, the bandits waited but when the time lock on the safe failed to operate, they scooped up loose cash and fled, Willis reported.

Kentucky Governor To Become Senator

Frankfort, Ky.—(AP)—Governor A. B. Chandler, a high official source disclosed today, will resign Monday and be appointed United States senator by Lieutenant Governor Keen Johnson, who will succeed him as the state's chief executive. Chandler will take the seat left vacant by the death early Tuesday of Senator M. M. Logan.

Peace and Democracy League And Chairman Dies in Clash Over 'Un-American' Activities

Washington—(AP)—The League for Peace and Democracy, Washington, branch, and the house committee investigating un-American activities exchanged today a hot round of criticism about just who was being "un-American."

When the committee convened, Chairman Dies (D-Texas) whipped out a league statement adopted at a meeting here last night and read excerpts.

One of these alleged that the committee, through its past inquiries into the league, was seeking to "brand as un-American the progressive policies and the social objectives of the New Deal which the American league supports."

Hitler Wants Peace Parley But Says Reich and Russia Must Decide Poland's Fate

Navy and Coast Guard Rush Vessels to Iroquois on Nazi Tip Liner Will be Sunk

Washington—(AP)—Navy and coast guard craft sped today toward a mid-Atlantic rendezvous with the American liner Iroquois, after the White House disclosed receipts of startling information that the refugee-laden steamer was to be sunk.

The tip came from the head of the German navy, but it left unanswered the questions of how and by whom the sinking was to be done. Likewise, it offered no explanation of how the reich acquired the information.

The White House disclaimed any belief in the report. Nevertheless, several naval ships and a coast guard cutter were rushed to accompany the Iroquois to New York, where she was due next Wednesday. The captain was ordered to search the ship for explosives and to double his lookouts and patrol watchmen.

The Iroquois, a 6,209-ton vessel, left Cobh, Ireland, Tuesday with a crew of 212 and 584 passengers. Ambassador Kennedy said in London last night that only those who were able to prove American citizenship had been permitted to book passage.

White House Statement
The vessel was chartered by the United States lines to bring home Americans caught in Europe by the outbreak of war.

The White House statement issued late yesterday said: "Yesterday the head of the German navy, Grand Admiral Raeder, officially informed the American government, through the United States naval attaché (Commander A. E. Schrader) in Berlin, that according to information on which he relied, an American ship, the Iroquois, is to be sunk when it nears our American east coast."

"The sinking of the Iroquois, Admiral Raeder said, would be accomplished through a repetition of circumstances which marked the loss of the Athenia."

(The British liner, Athenia, with many Americans on board, was sunk off the coast of Ireland the day England declared that a state of war existed with Germany. The British blamed a torpedo from a German submarine, but in Germany there were contentions that the Athenia had been sunk by foes of the reich to arouse feeling in the United States.)

Cabinet Session
Mention of the Athenia in Admiral Raeder's dispatch conveyed to many persons here the impression that Germany was, in effect, saying Britain or France intended to turn to page 2 col. 3.

3 Women Injured, One Seriously, in Highway Accident

Mrs. Edward L. Fraser Suffers Broken Back When Car Leaves Road

Three Appleton women were injured, one seriously, about 5:45 Thursday afternoon when their car skidded on County Trunk A after crossing the Highway 41 construction project, crashed into the ditch and overturned several times into a field.

The injured: Mrs. Edward L. Fraser, 64, 548 N. Division street, broken back, possible rib fractures. Condition unfavorable.

Mrs. Catherine Fountain, 63, 126 N. Bennett street, fractured left arm, lacerated scalp, multiple bruises.

Mrs. Frank Cloos, 64, 538 N. Garfield place, bruises about the face, neck and body.

Mrs. Fountain, driver of the car, apparently lost control of the machine after crossing the extension of Highway 41 where the road is under construction, according to Jack Frenz, county motorcycle officer who investigated. She was driving south on County Trunk A, crossed the soft sand fill and the car began to skid about 130 feet south of the intersection, he said.

The machine swerved to the right and then to the left but stayed on the road for 186 feet before plunging into the ditch. The car was found lying on its side about 30 feet east of the road, Frenz reported.

Frenz said a barricade with lighted flares about 550 feet north of the intersection indicated the road was under construction.

The three women were taken to St. Elizabeth hospital.

New Tax Appeals Board To Start Hearings Soon

Madison—(AP)—The new board of tax appeals announced today it would start hearings soon on all appeal cases pending before the former state tax commission and the county boards of review eliminated in reorganization act.

Members of the board are Chairman W. J. Conway, Wisconsin Rapids; D. L. Broadfoot, Mondovi; and Harry Slater, Milwaukee. Conway said many cases would be heard during October and that calendars were being prepared.

Union and A.F.L. are Enjoined From Making Membership Transfers

Washington—(AP)—Justice T. Alan Goldsborough enjoined the American Federation of Labor and the Teamsters union today from transferring beer-truck drivers from the Brewery Workers' union to the Teamsters' union.

Justice Goldsborough, in district court, held that the workers involved had not asked the transfer and for him to permit it "would amount to a judicial recognition of authority acquired by usurpation."

The Brewery Workers' union, in asking the injunction, told the court there was a move afoot at the current A. F. of L. convention in Cincinnati to suspend the Brewery Workers union for seeking through the court proceeding to block transfer of the truck drivers to the Teamsters union as ordered by the 1933 convention of the A. F. of L.

During final argument, Justice Goldsborough remarked from the bench that he believed the Teamsters' union had waived the right to organize brewery truck drivers as long ago as 1910.

Britain and France Prepare to Study Hitler Proposals

Europe Must be Freed From Menace of Aggression, London View

Paris—(AP)—Premier Daladier today in effect turned down Adolf Hitler's peace proposals with a personal declaration that only a French-British victory will assure a "regime of real justice and lasting peace in Europe."

London—(AP)—Anthony Eden hailed the British empire's wartime response tonight as "a determination shared by us all that the rule of violence must cease."

In a broadcast to the commonwealth the dominions secretary declared:

"The perpetual menace to the freedom of nations, small and great, must be removed, so that the peoples of the world may once more be able to live their own lives in security and peace."

London—(AP)—The British government said tonight that Adolf Hitler's peace proposals would be "subjected to careful examination in consultation with the governments of the dominions and the French republic."

"But," the statement added, "it is necessary to remember two things:

"First, no peace proposal is likely to be accepted which does not effectively free Europe from the menace of aggression.

"Second, that something more than words would be required to establish confidence" in any peace proposals Germany might make.

The government statement, read by a foreign office spokesman, said that Hitler's proposals in their present form "are in many respects vague and obscure. But it is noted that they contain no suggestion for reparations for the wrongs done by Germany to other peoples."

Two Divisions
The statement said the speech was only available in the course of the afternoon and "it has not been possible to give more than preliminary examination" to it.

The statement said, however, the speech apparently was divided into two parts. The first, mainly a survey of the truth which will be readily recognized by the people of this country and indeed of the whole world."

The second part, the statement added, "contains what Hitler described as a few proposals for peace."

"The government asserted that 'the repeated suggestions that Great Britain was responsible for the war have no foundation in fact.' It said that on the contrary 'the efforts of his majesty's government to preserve peace during the successive crises brought about by Germany are well-known and recognized.'"

3 Persons Killed in Automobile Accidents

Milwaukee—(AP)—Automobile accident killed three persons in Wisconsin late yesterday and today.

Orville Shunk, 18, of Kewaunee, was killed and three companions seriously injured early today when their automobile struck a culvert on Highway 141 east of Green Bay.

The injured, all of Kewaunee, are Herbert Welsing, 18, Jerry Provechek, 25, and Robert Hrabik, 17.

In the same accident minor hurts were suffered by Walter Delwiche, 20, and Art Sisel, 20, also of Kewaunee.

The other two victims, killed late yesterday, were Harold Anderson, 19, of Windsor, and Albert Koehler, 38, of Kewaunee. Anderson lost his life when his automobile crashed into a culvert near Windsor.

Koehler was struck by a truck while walking on Highway 55 towards his farm home.

2 Missing Children are Found in Unused Icebox

Milwaukee—(AP)—Two small children, object of an intensive 16-hour police search, were found unharmed today in a large unused icebox in which they had locked themselves yesterday afternoon.

The search, participated in by 49 policemen and detectives, ended when Patrolman Walter Bruner entered a storage warehouse and saw their tear-streaked faces pressed against the ice-box window.

"You're a good policeman," said 4-year-old Elmer Fausz, Jr. "I want my mummy," sobbed 3-year-old Dixie Lee King.

IROQUOIS MASTER
Captain Edgar A. Chelton (above) is master of the American steamship Iroquois which German officials say, according to a statement released at the White House, will be sunk when it nears the American east coast "through a repetition of circumstances which marked the loss of the steamship Athenia."

Bergdoll to Serve Added 3 Years, Tribunal Decides

Also Must Go to Prison For 4 1/2 Years for Draft Evasion

New York—(AP)—Seven and one half years of hard labor as a military prisoner is the penalty Grover Cleveland Bergdoll must pay for dodging service in the American army during the World War.

In a drab aftermath to the days of war hysteria, Bergdoll stood silent and stolid in an army gymnasium on Governor's island yesterday as a 13-officer court martial convicted him of desertion and escape.

The pudgy middle-aged prisoner smiled when his punishment was fixed at three years instead of the maximum sentence of five and one half years. He also still has four and one-half years to go on the five-year sentence for draft evasion.

He would have taken to escape two army guards in 1920 and fled to Germany.

Neither Bergdoll nor his blonde German wife, Berta, 32, mother of his five children, made any comment on the verdict.

Conspiracy Charge Dropped
A charge of conspiracy against Bergdoll, who was accused of plotting with Eugene Stachler, the Bergdoll family chauffeur, was dismissed by the military tribunal.

Civilian Defense Counsel Harry Weinberger announced he would appeal to the United States Supreme court against the decision of Federal Judge Alfred C. Cox, who refused to grant a writ of habeas corpus for Bergdoll in the case out of military jurisdiction.

Bergdoll will remain an army prisoner until 1947 in gloomy Castle William on Governor's island, army officials indicated, unless the verdict is not approved by the reviewing officer, Lieutenant General Hugh A. Drum, the judge advocate general of the army, or the president.

'Formidable' Powers For President During War, Vandenberg Says

Washington—(AP)—Senator Vandenberg (R-Mich.) described as "formidable" today a list of laws which Attorney General Murphy told the senate contained powers that President Roosevelt might exercise during war or emergency.

"It is a clear demonstration of the fact that there is a vast quantity of floating power that may be used in war or emergency," Vandenberg said.

The Michigan senator, author of a resolution which requested Murphy to inform the senate of presidential emergency powers, conceded that Murphy's refusal to express an opinion on their extent was "probably sound under the precedents."

Murphy merely cited to the senate the titles of about 100 statutes granting powers to the president. He said the list was incomplete and could not be finished except by long study.

"To comply with this resolution would require me to give an opinion to the senate on legal phases of the subject matter of the resolution," Murphy wrote. Historically, he said, attorneys general had ruled that they had no authority to give legal opinions to congress.

Denies Designs on Rumania, Ukraine, Urals, Denmark

BID TO LONDON

Asserts Understanding With England Would Be Boon to Europe

Berlin—(AP)—Adolf Hitler today proposed a general European conference for a "laying down of arms" which would try for settlement of all problems separating European nations.

To the reichstag he addressed a speech which nazis called the greatest peace address since the World War.

Hitler said the object toward which he was working was European peace.

He assured the world he had no designs on Rumania, the Ukraine, the Urals or Denmark.

His interests in eastern Europe as well as in Scandinavia, he said, were purely economic.

Turning to soviet Russia, Hitler recalled that in his recent Danzig speech he cited the different principles on which the U. S. S. R. and Germany were organized and then added:

"However, since then it has become clear that Mr. Stalin saw nothing in these Russian soviet principles which should prevent him from cultivating friendly relations with states of different political creeds, national-socialist Germany sees no reason why it should adopt another criterion."

Will End 'Danger Spot'
"Germany and Russia together will relieve one of the acutest danger spots of Europe of its threatening character and will, each in her own sphere, contribute to the welfare of peoples living there, thus aiding European peace in general."

He asserted the greatest boon for Europe would be a British-German understanding but that Britain had worked against German interests while Germany never had crossed Britain's path.

At length he attempted to draw a picture of how France and Great Britain can have peace if they want it.

He said they could have it in the name of all peoples but not in the name of Jewish agitators.

The fuhrer asked the world a question nazis frequently have posed recently:

"Why is there war in the west?" Poland of the Versailles treaty cannot be reconstructed, Hitler said. What Poland is to become, he declared, will be determined by Germany and by soviet Russia alone.

Favors Peace Zone
Germany and Russia, he explained, are ready to make all sacrifices for creation of a peace zone in eastern Europe.

DNE, official news agency, sent out an "unofficial version" of the speech from which the following is taken:

"We have again summoned you here to give you an insight into the present and as far as possible the future. This ringing of bells signifies Germany is reliving a great and historically unique victory."

"An army of about 50 infantry and cavalry divisions (in Poland) entered the lists against us. Destruction of our German reich was regarded as self-evident."

"Eight days after the outbreak of this fight the die had been cast."

The fuhrer then gave a flowing picture of deeds performed by the German army in Poland, his reference to the ringing of bells continued.

Oklahoma Desperado Slain by Detective

Tulsa—(AP)—A young desperado who robbed a Picher, Okla., bank of $1,185 with a bottle of fake "nitroglycerine" was shot and killed by a Tulsa detective 24 hours later.

Detective W. E. Woolley spotted Al Rice, 23, in a taxi cab late yesterday. He ordered "come along." Rice reached for a pistol. Woolley fired three times. Rice fell dead.

Raymond Quirk, Tulsa salesman, identified Rice as one of three youths who kidnaped him Monday night and held him captive until after the robbery.

Asks Labor Election in General Motors Plants
Detroit—(AP)—The CIO United Automobile workers petitioned the national labor relations board today for employees' elections in 60 plants of General Motors Corporation.

Walter P. Reuther, director of the union's General Motors department said the plants specified employ 130,000 workers.

The corporation and rival A. F. of L. unions previously had petitioned the board for determination of bargaining agencies.

Governor Says He Will Call Early Special Session

Nearly All of Highway Funds Earmarked, Heil Asserts

Waukegan—(7)—Governor Heil declared here yesterday that all but $1,128,000 of $60,000,000 in highway funds was earmarked. At the same time, Heil said he would call an early special session of the legislature.

Heil, addressing the Kiwanis club, made the revelation in response to suggestions that the state revenue problem could be met by diverting highway funds.

"My goodness gracious, folks," Heil returned, "I'd like to take it from there. But when all the monies are received and all the obligations are met, there's only $1,128,000 left out of the $60,000,000. The rest is all earmarked."

"That's not my fault, but the fault of the legislature; the fault of senators and assemblymen from the different districts."

"I couldn't do anything with the highway fund. I couldn't get the legislature to agree that dynasty ought to be broken up."

Heil said the special session would concern "only a tax bill" after the legislature had rested. He did not name a date.

Blames Legislature

Concerning taxes, Heil said: "The tax problem still is with us. Remember when I told the legislature that I was not a dictator and they were not rubber stamps? The legislature, with all its wisdom, has not been able to pass a revenue bill."

"Your legislators are responsible for not creating a revenue bill at this session. They're going to adjourn sine die. I'll call them back for only one purpose, to find ways and means to raise money to pay obligations they have incurred."

Heil praised the legislature for refusing to approve a Progressive sponsored bill which "would have cost the people of the state more money."

Referring to the Progressives, Heil said the Republicans had been tearing down "a great mountain" so that "it might be built up again as something good for the whole, not for the select few and their spoils system."

He added: "Everything you do, they (the Progressives) try to set you back by propaganda."

Heil declared that some men elected as Republicans were "pussycats" and that voters should not send a legislator to Madison "with the color of a Republican when he's an anarchist."

Malfeasance Suit Decision Reserved

Arguments Heard in Action Brought Against Waupaca Mayor

Waupaca—Arguments growing out of malfeasance charges against Mayor A. A. Washburn, Clintonville, were made Thursday before Judge Walter Schinz, who is presiding in circuit court this week, by Attorneys Wendell McHenry and Theodore Brazeau of Wisconsin Rapids. Judge Schinz reserved his decision until a later date.

The charges brought against Mayor Washburn last February were contained in petitions bearing more than 600 signatures and alleged the mayor "willfully failed or neglected" to enforce laws and permitted city officers to draw pay for extra services in violation of the state statutes.

Washburn, serving his second term as mayor, said at the time the petitions were circulated that he had "nothing to apologize for" and that the petitions were put out by a "small group of defeated and disgruntled citizens." The petitions were circulated by the Clintonville Taxpayer's league.

Allies Will Have to Back Lot of Water if They Wish To Accept Hitler's Offers

BY DEWITT MACKENZIE

New York—(7)—Herr Hitler's peace proposals call for a general conference which would deal broadly with all Europe's political and economic ills and also would provide for a measure of disarmament. There were conciliatory touches in his long speech, delivered before the reichstag today.

The most notable was his declaration that his proposed conference must not be held under a threat of force, presumably an answer to the Anglo-French refusal to consider terms accompanied by threats.

Again the fuhrer made a sweeping renunciation of any further territorial claims, excepting for his old colonial demands. And he said the colonial claims weren't made in the form of an ultimatum but were based on political justice.

In fact, Hitler said his interests in both eastern Europe and Scandinavia were wholly economic. On the whole it appeared that he was striving, without giving way on any vital points, to present a program which might attract favorable attention.

His peace proposals would seem to be sweeping enough so that they would call for full consideration of

Educator Will Confer With Senior Students On Vocational Topics

Chester Sanford, nationally known educator, will come to Appleton High school Monday to carry on personal conferences with the seniors concerning their vocational problems. Sanford, who will stay the entire week, will address the faculty Wednesday.

Sanford, Wis., remembers Sanford as its superintendent of schools during the years 1910 to 1916. He also was on the faculty of Platteville State Teachers college from 1916 to 1921.

Among the books which he has written are "The Geography of North America and its Possessions," "Modern Americans," "Modern Europeans," "Other Soldiers," "The Community and Its Young People" and "How to Choose Your Vocation."

Thousands Attend Funeral Rites for Chicago Cardinal

All People of City are Designated as Honorary Pallbearers

Chicago—(7)—The people of Chicago, appointed en masse as honorary pallbearers for George Cardinal Mundelein, emerged in tens of thousands today for his funeral. Long before the sun struck Holy Name cathedral they had taken their stations in the street. When the brilliant liturgical procession began at 10 o'clock they were massed for blocks around

Within the draped edifice, 50 bishops and 13 archbishops prayed that Cardinal Mundelein, third archbishop of Chicago and first prince of the church in the west, might rest in peace.

The solemn pontifical requiem mass for Cardinal Mundelein was celebrated by Archbishop Amleto Cicognani, papal delegate to the United States, and four of the cardinal's bishops. They were for the first time the black and gold vestments brought from Rome by Cardinal Mundelein after his last visit.

"It is to the glory of George Cardinal Mundelein and his flock," said Archbishop John J. Cantwell of Los Angeles in his funeral sermon, "that under his inspiration and guidance and through their cooperation Chicago can show the world an example of that harmonious life which is so much needed in the world today and which must be the foundation of progress and peace."

In contrast to the magnificence of the mass, the diocesan consultants read a simple note in designating Cardinal Mundelein's pallbearers. Twelve young priests who were members of the last class Cardinal Mundelein ordained were the active pallbearers. In recognition of their direct and indirect assistance in building the archdiocese of Chicago, the entire population of the city was named honorary pallbearers.

Among the distinguished citizens attending the funeral were Post-Consul General James A. Farley, Governor Henry Horne of Illinois and Mayor Edward J. Kelly of Chicago.

GERMAN NAVAL HEAD SAYS AMERICAN SHIP IS TO BE SUNK

A statement released by the White House stated that the head of the German Navy had informed the U. S. naval attaché in Berlin that the American steamship Iroquois (shown above as she was aground in Miami harbor in 1938) would be sunk as she neared the American east coast "through a repetition of circumstances which marked the loss of the steamship Athenia." The Iroquois is en route to the United States with a passenger list of Americans fleeing the war zone.

to sink the Iroquois, and then blame a German submarine.

Stephen T. Early, a presidential secretary, said the cabinet devoted almost its entire session yesterday to the admiralty sources spoke up to make it public. The latter was done, Early said, in order that the American people and the world would "know as much about it as the government."

Early said the White House was not putting out the warning "for the purpose of creating any alarm."

"We don't believe, as a matter of fact," he added, "that any people in the United States will believe the report is true or could be true."

"TOO ABSURD TO DENY"

London—(7)—Admiralty sources today brushed aside as "too absurd to deny" an official German tip to Washington implying that the United States liner Iroquois was to be sunk in fulfillment of a British plot.

The admiralty sources spoke up officially. Official comment was deferred but naval officials were reported astonished by German Grand Admiral Erich Raeder's warning to the United States, through a naval attaché at the Berlin embassy, that the Iroquois would be sunk "through a repetition of circumstances which marked the loss of the Athenia."

United States Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy said he was keeping in closest touch with his and the British governments regarding the reported threat to the Iroquois.

Ambassador Waits

Kennedy remained at his desk long past midnight after word of the warning had been received. One embassy official remarked, "all we can do now is to pray."

The worried embassy staff feared Raeder's warning would complicate the problem of repatriating some 4,000 Americans who are still in the United Kingdom.

About 2,500 of these Americans were said to have no urgent reason for remaining but have made no definite plans to go home. Many of them have told the embassy, "We'll wait and see."

NO PRECEDENT SET

Hyde Park, N. Y.—(7)—President Roosevelt told reporters today that the dispatching of naval vessels and a coast guard cutter to guard the American steamship Iroquois was a good illustration of the operation of the neutrality patrol in Atlantic waters.

Catlin Slated to Succeed Peterson as Floor Leader

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

Madison—Changes in the Republican assembly leadership in the special legislative session later this year which is regarded as inevitable will result from Governor Heil's appointment yesterday of Assemblyman R. W. Peterson of Berlin to the public service commission.

Stepping into the place vacated by Peterson, who has been the Republican majority leader, will be 28-year-old Assemblyman Mark Catlin Jr. of Appleton. Catlin is serving his second term as the representative of the First Outagamie county district and has been an assistant floorleader during the regular session now ending.

It was indicated that Peterson's resignation also will bring a promotion for other leading assembly Republicans. In some quarters it was regarded as likely that Catlin's position as assistant leader will be assumed by young Anthony Gruszka of Mosinee, a first term member.

A revival of the old-fashioned political debate in Wisconsin seemed likely today after the issuance of a precedent was being established and warships would accompany other American ships, the president replied in the negative.

Mr. Roosevelt said he had nothing to add to the White House statement when he was asked whether the fact that a squadron of war vessels had been sent to intercept the Iroquois should be interpreted as meaning this government considered the German report true.

The president said he did not know where the naval and coast guard fleet would meet the Iroquois and would not say if he did know.

Already At Sea

With regard to the neutrality patrol, the chief executive remarked that the patrol vessels were at sea already and that makes the whole procedure much simpler.

The president sat in a White House touring car and chatted with newspaper men at nearby Highland, N. Y., after he had left a special train which had brought him from Washington. From Highland he drove to his country estate, where he planned to spend the weekend checking up on his crop of spruce trees and the damage done it by drought.

Mr. Roosevelt had not had an opportunity to hear or read Adolf Hitler's speech proposing a general conference for the "laying down of arms."

Asked about reports that he or the government had invited former President Ignace Moscicki of Poland to come to America to live, the president said he knew nothing about it.

French Troops Preparing for German Offense

Report Older Nazi Soldiers Being Replaced By Younger Men

BY JOHN H. MARTIN

Paris—(7)—French troops dug in on the muddy Saarland front today in preparation against any large-scale German offensive, while French police rounded up communist leaders behind the lines.

French military circles reported large German troop movements. Older German soldiers were reported being replaced rapidly by younger campaigners from the German armies that crushed Poland.

Last night was calm, however. The war ministry communiqué said only patrols were active in the sector southwest of Saarbrücken. The strengthening of French vanguards was ascribed in political quarters to belief that the Nazi "peace offensive" had become a dead issue even before Fuhrer Hitler's address of the reichstag today.

Destroy Pictures

Police in Paris and in other cities tore pictures of Lenin and Stalin from walls in communist centers and searched for Arthur Ramette who, with Florimond Bonte, wrote to Edouard Herriot, president of the chamber of deputies, demanding a parliamentary session to consider peace.

Orders were issued for the arrest of Ramette and Bonte, both communist members of the chamber of deputies, but Ramette had fled.

Police said searches of both men's homes had disclosed evidence to justify charges of "being in communication with a foreign power."

The ousting of communist mayors and municipal councillors continued with 67 removed in the Paris region and a total of 317 soon to be replaced elsewhere by appointees named by district police prefects.

Three Men are Fined For Parking Overtime

Three men were fined $1 and costs each for violating city parking ordinances when they were arraigned before Judge Thomas H. Ryan in municipal court Thursday afternoon. They are Frank Marx, 605 Chestnut street, Neenah, Herman Schneider, 526 N. Rankin street, and Arnold J. Laudert, 1115 N. Oaidea street.

personal investigation of Dawson's case and that he had visited Brillion recently to interview persons who had known Dawson.

It was after that trip of investigation, he revealed, that he had written to Edward Meyer, attorney for the former banker, on behalf of the board assuring a parole with the vacating of the federal sentence.

Meyer had told the court that Dawson had been "a splendid citizen" in Brillion and that he had not profited personally from the embezzlements. He said that Dawson took the money to cover up bank shortages resulting from "bad accounts."

In Milwaukee this week Judge Duffy expressed the opinion that he did not have the power to lift the federal sentence, but he suggested that Dawson's counsel file a brief.

State Parole Board Seeks Way to Release Brillion Bank Cashier

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

Madison—Frank Klode, chairman of the state board of control, today confirmed a report that the state board will grant a parole to George E. Dawson, former cashier of the Farmers and Merchants Exchange bank of Brillion, if his federal sentence is vacated.

The statement on the parole was made during a plea to Federal Judge F. Ryan Duffy in Milwaukee to vacate the federal sentence of Dawson, 60, was sentenced in a state court in November of 1937 to 1 to 10 years in state prison for embezzlement of $38,921 in bank funds.

In April of 1938 he was sentenced in the federal court to serve three years in federal prison after he had completed the state term.

Klode said that he had made a

Lawrence Student Late for Classes Because of the War

He was late for school, but he didn't need an excuse. He just told the teachers that war had broken out in Europe and they understood.

His name is Edward Doucet, 18, a slim, good-looking freshman at Lawrence Conservatory of Music who has a good yarn to tell about an American jazz orchestra that got stranded in Paris when the second World War broke out and who can stroke a swell version of "Star Dust" out of a piano as easy as you would wind your wrist watch. He's had his own band since he was 14.

It's a cinch that the Easton, Ill., student is not going to have much peace wherever there are Lawrence students, a piano, and a leisure hour. When he isn't playing some exhilarating number on the ivories, he'll answer questions about how it seems to see a submarine bulging out of the water near the nice, friendly freighter on which you're a passenger.

Or the time that he and two of his orchestra mates were buddled over a card table in LeHavre, France, and heard an air raid siren scream its frightening warning. "It was the biggest scare of my life," he says.

Planes Visible

Planes were visible, far up in the sky, but they didn't drop anything. Doucet and his companions just stood on a LeHavre street and watched them. They felt funny inside and wished they were eating hot dogs in an American baseball park.

Doucet was the piano player in an American orchestra of five pieces, all young fellows, who sailed from New York aboard the German boat, Deutschland, arriving in Germany July 20. They bounced around Germany, Belgium, and Holland, having a great time. Finally they wound up in Paris.

They were in Paris when France and England declared war on Germany. The leader of the band had left all his instruments and some baggage in Germany. So had a couple others. They never saw it again. Doucet still had most of his; and being a piano player, he had no instrument to lose.

German sailings, of course, were canceled, so they couldn't go back on the Deutschland. Two of the fellows struck out for Holland, from whence they eventually boarded a boat for America. The three remaining, including Doucet, hired a Paris cab driver to take them to LeHavre, more than 200 miles away on the coast. The cabby did it for the grand sum of $10 in American money.

Some Ride

"It was a pretty odd car, but it held together," Doucet recalls. They tried to get passage on the President Harding, but it was jammed. They waited two weeks. It was during this interval that they experienced air raid warnings. In Paris they had gone through blackouts and eyed observation balloons over the city. They were getting enough of war. Finally they wedged into the American wreighter, S. S. Scho-dack. It was supposed to carry eight passengers; it had 65 for this trip.

The first night out, three sub-marines followed the freighter," Doucet relates. "Most of the passengers didn't know much about it until the next day, but I got up early in the morning just in time to see one of them leaving our stern and submerging. The captain of the sub had looked over the ship's papers and the crew of the freighter told us."

Once when Doucet and a companion were up in the wireless room, they heard two SOS calls from vessels that had been attacked by German U-boats.

The freighter took two weeks to get to New York and Doucet enrolled the latter part of last week at Lawrence.

Safety Zone Is Important Step To Protect Ships

300-Mile Area Along American Coasts Conforms to Precedents

BY DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington—Declaration by the pan-American republics of a "safety zone" extending about 300 miles out to sea along the coasts of North and South America south of Canada constitutes one of the most significant steps ever taken by neutral nations and is well-supported by precedents in international law.

Even the question of enforcement within that zone permits a practical program which the belligerents are bound to respect, for, contrary to recently expressed suppositions in the press, the United States and the other countries of this hemisphere need not use physical force at all, but merely need apply economic pressure to attain compliance.

Both the North and South American continents contain supplies vitally needed by both sets of belligerents. While it is true that direct German purchases have been discontinued, nevertheless indirect purchases through European neutrals like Russia and Italy, as well as the Scandinavian countries, are well within the control of the pan-American republics.

There is not the slightest need to use a naval patrol to keep belligerent ships out of the "safety zone," for the United States and pan-American countries will shortly notify the belligerents that trade within the safety zone must not be impeded if the belligerents are to continue to be permitted to obtain supplies from the Americas.

Established Rule
The proclamation of a safety zone conforms to precedents established in various so-called tribunals dealing with blockade. It is a well-established rule that notice of blockade must be specific, and that zones of blockade can be limited so that any neutral vessel seeking to enter such zones may be captured. But there is no justification in the precedents for making the whole ocean a blockaded zone. The pan-American republics whose representatives met at Panama were modest in their outline of the area to be included under the safety zone, for, logically, neutrals could have insisted that no shipping shall be interfered with unless destined for Europe, and only then for countries contiguous to the belligerents.

The idea that a ship plying between New York and Rio de Janeiro is subject to a submarine blockade by Germany or a naval blockade by the British is so contrary to precedents of the past that it is difficult to see how the outline of a safety zone can, with logic, be protested unless abuse of the privilege should develop within the zone among belligerent vessels of either group—the allies or the dictators.

Destination alone justifies seizure and condemnation of ship and cargo in voyages to ports under blockade, and even a mere sailing toward a blockaded area has not been held to sanction detention of ship or cargo. In the famous "Petershoff" case involving damage claims, it was decided that a vessel destined for a neutral port with no ulterior destination for herself, and none by sea for her cargo to a blockaded place, violates no blockade.

Submarine Warfare
The whole doctrine of submarine warfare arose in the last war through the formal announcement, first by Great Britain of a blockade in the North sea against Germany, and subsequently, a counter-blockade of even wider extent by the Berlin admiralty. The announced intention of conducting "unrestricted submarine warfare" by Germany related solely to the blockaded war zones and made access to neutral ports in Europe virtually impossible to American ships.

Majority of City Departments Show Healthy Balances

Only Relief Division Has No Chance to Keep Within Allotment

Kaukauna — With a third of the year yet to come it appears, from a report of Mrs. Mary Hooyman, city treasurer, that most of the city departments will keep within their 1939 budget allotments. Only the relief department, already $10,337 in the red, has no chance to keep within its $20,000 allotment. WPA lay-offs have in large measure accounted for the excess costs.

Amounts remaining in the various city funds are as follows: road district, $4784; sewer district, $248; poor fund, $10,557; firemen's pension fund, $10,246; policemen's pension fund, $2,558; library fund, $1,264; vocational school fund, $4,867; public school fund, $1,493; commercial and industrial development fund, $3,525.

The council authorized the borrowing of a short term loan of $30,000 Tuesday evening. This will be the only short term obligation outstanding. The city's bonded debt is now $382,000, which plus the $30,000 means a total debt of $412,000. The legal limit to which the city may borrow is about $440,000. A year ago the city's debt almost reached this limit, but a retirement plan is now in effect under which about $25,000 will be paid off each year in addition to interest payments on the rest.

Few People in This Nation Want U. S. to Get Into European War, And the Number Is Decreasing

BY DR. GEORGE GALLUP
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J.—In its latest survey the American Institute of Public Opinion finds that only 5 per cent, or 1 person in every 20 of those interviewed, thinks the United States should send troops abroad to fight in the European war. Even among the people of Polish, Austrian, English or Canadian extraction the number who want the United States to participate in war is negligible.

Moreover, such sentiment as existed a month ago for joining the conflict has shrunk precipitately since the outbreak of actual war early in September.

The survey asked voters throughout the nation: "Should we declare war and send our army and navy abroad to fight Germany?"

Month Ago	Today
Yes	16% 5%
No	84 95

The Institute plans to measure opinion on this issue at regular intervals in the future in order to keep a running index of war sentiment. Such an index will reveal the effect on American opinion of battles, propaganda and other events as the European war progresses. At the start of the conflict it is clear that little war fever exists in this country; that 95 people in every 100 want to keep our troops and our navy at home and remain at peace.

At the same time, however, recent Institute studies have found an increase in sentiment for changing the Neutrality Act in order to permit England, France and other countries to buy American war supplies. The increase came directly after President Roosevelt's speech before Congress, Sept. 21, in which he said he regretted having signed the present Act with its arms embargo provision. Before his speech, 57 per cent of voters with opinions in an Institute survey wanted the Neutrality Law revised. After the speech, the figure rose to 62 per cent. A new survey is now under way to measure the effect on public opinion of the debate in Congress over the issue.

Especially interesting in today's survey is the vote by nationalities. Each individual was asked to give the name of the country in which his father was born. When this data was correlated with the vote on declaring war against Germany, no great variation by nationalities was found. The strongest sentiment for fighting Germany came from individuals whose fathers had been born in Poland, but even their vote was not high—11 per cent. Among persons whose fathers had been born in other countries the vote in favor of fighting Germany ranged from 3 per cent to 8 per cent.

Persons Whose Fathers Were Born In:

FIGHT/GERMANY	Yes	No
United States	5% 95%
Russia	4 96
Italy	3 97
Germany	4 96
Ireland	4 96
Canada	7 93
Austria	7 93
England	8 92
Poland	11 89
Other Countries	4 96

The survey likewise found only slight variations in sentiment by age and income groups. Among the poor voters there is a somewhat stronger disposition to fight Germany than among the more prosperous voters. In the upper income group only 3 per cent think the United States should declare war on Germany, whereas in the lower income groups the figure is 7 per cent.

Among geographical sections the Southern states were found slightly more in favor of war than other sections, 9 per cent of Southern voters approving such a step as compared to between 4 and 6 per cent for all other sections.

Suggests Reading Books on World War to 'Keep Calm'

BY RAYMOND CLAPPER

Washington—Perhaps it seems weak to be saying over and over again—"Keep calm. Keep cool." Yet, if we must be hysterical, let's be hysterical in our effort to keep cool. For our own emotions are our most dangerous enemies in these times when the need is to build up our own defense and keep out of Europe.

If you ask how are we to keep cool, I recommend the same dash of cold water which I take frequently. Sit down for an hour and read a book. Read "Road to War," by Walter Millis. Or read "Propaganda for War," by H. C. Peterson.

They are easy to read, and with compact, photographic detail, they reconstruct the weird emotional scenes which led us into war before. You don't have to accept the interpretations in these books. Just read them for the facts.

In these times they are the best gas masks available.

Most of us recognize without question now the desirability of keeping American citizens off armed British munition carriers, sailing out of New York for English ports. But do you realize that Wilson—and a lot of other people—were ready to go to war in 1916 rather than order Americans to keep off such ships?

The Lusitania, carrying munitions to England, had been sunk and a number of American tourists aboard were lost. We protested. Some months later the German government decided to submarine all armed merchant ships on sight. A congressman, Rep. McElmore of Texas, introduced a resolution warning American citizens against traveling on such ships.

Opposed Resolution on Traveling on Armed Ships

Wilson opposed the resolution. A group of Republicans brought in a counter-resolution, declaring this government should not acquiesce in the submarine order of the German admiralty.

It was at about this time that Colonel House, who thought we ought to go to war to help England, was signing a secret memorandum with Sir Edward Gray, British foreign minister, which stated that if Germany did not agree to peace as a result of a move Wilson was then contemplating, but which was not made, then the United States "probably would enter the war against Germany."

Strong sentiment existed in congress for keeping out of war and for keeping Americans off belligerent ships. But Wilson called in the leaders, told them the United States should neither bar armed merchantmen from American ports nor prevent Americans from taking passage in them. Furthermore, in case Germany should attack one of these ships with American citizens on board, he would consider it his duty to hold Germany to strict account. This, so the congressional leaders said, meant war.

To put on the heat, Wilson published a letter to the chairman of his senate foreign relations committee saying: "I shall do everything in my power to keep the United States out of war. . . . But to forbid our people to exercise their rights for fear we might be called upon to vindicate them would be a deep humiliation indeed."

Wilson Was Given Unanimous Support
Such was our hysteria that Wilson was showered with almost unanimous press support. Those who wanted to keep Americans off munition carriers were denounced. Even the calm New York Times said "It seems as if congress were and run up the black, white and red flag in its place."

The New York Journal of Commerce said "War with Germany would not be a very serious matter to the United States, if it hastened peace, would be distinctly beneficial."

The sensible proposal to keep Americans off dangerous belligerent ships was crushed under a flag-waving cry that "unpatriotic people were willing to surrender American rights."

Now it is almost universally regarded as plain common sense to keep American tourists off belligerent ships. We have learned a good deal and we prefer to uphold American honor by real defense of the western hemisphere rather than by standing back of sightseers who want to go to Europe even if it means war.

That lesson can be applied to numerous phases of the keep-out-of-war legislation now being debated.

STOMACH DISTRESS QUICKLY RELIEVED

Amazing Reports of Relief With Williams Formula Create Sensation Here.

Men and women from far and near are flocking daily to the druggist to get Williams Formula, the famous medicine which is attracting widespread attention.

People suffering from acid indigestion, stomach gas, sick-headaches, nervousness, dizziness, "half alive" feeling because of excess acidity and lazy elimination declare they can hardly believe the remarkable relief they have experienced from taking Williams Formula.

A well known retired farmer, Mr. C. W. Staefler, 834 West Spring Street, Appleton, Wisconsin, tells his amazing experience to his friends so they can judge for themselves why this medicine is so widely accepted.

"It is very gratifying the way Williams Formula has given me relief. For some time I have been having attacks of gas pains due to poor digestion. Evidently my food was not being taken care of properly and a short time after eating, those pains would start and I felt awfully tight due to bloating. I had very little appetite for food and was underweight, and run down."

"A short time ago I started using Williams Formula and it soon began to take hold. Those gas attacks have been relieved and I am getting a better appetite. Also I am gaining in weight and strength. I am feeling better now than for a long time and I give Williams Formula full credit for the relief it has brought me."

MR. C. W. STAEFLER

Why should you suffer spells of dizziness, sick headaches, nausea, poor appetite, gas, bloating, run-down, "half-alive" feeling, due to acid stomach and lazy elimination? Williams Formula may be just the thing you need to bring you relief and a new zest for living. Williams Formula is a compound of Natural Herbs and Minerals which start right to work giving relief, just like taking several good medicines in one. It is sold at good drug stores in three sizes—$1, $1.50, $3. Costs only a few cents a day to take and may be worth $10 a bottle to you in the relief it gives. Surely you owe it to yourself to give it a fair trial. Get a bottle of Williams Formula today at—

Censorship Doesn't Suppress Truth in Reporting on War

BY JOHN EVANS

New York—(P)—Europe's censors hinder but fail to halt the essentially truthful telling of the war news. Censors delay dispatches, delete phrases and suppress some dispatches but much of the important news originates where there is no real censorship. The American reporter usually gets his story and sends it.

Friday, Sept. 1, when Adolf Hitler went into Poland, the British censor marched into cable, wireless, telegraph and telephone offices. He created such confusion that Prime Minister Chamberlain changed the mechanism last Monday. He replaced one set of censors with two and the British newspapers voiced their unhappiness at the change.

Relatively, the censorship situation is what it was Sept. 1. There remain these three forms in various countries:

1. Official censoring of local
2. Primary Forms
3. Official censoring of local newspapers to control what the public shall know.

2. British official censorship of dispatches to the United States and other countries. Elsewhere the American newspaper man in particular is trusted to use discretion on military information.

3. Censorship of fear or patriotism among officials who wish to make news favorable to their countries or are afraid of criticism.

London is the only important capital where the United States reporters submit all their copy to official censors who suppress or delete what they do not approve. Under new regulations each government office will have censors to approve what is issued to the public but that censored matter then must go through other general censors.

Little Reich Censorship
Germany alone of the belligerents gives the United States reporter practically normal peace-time facilities. The Associated Press men, like other well-known and established correspondents, file their news without censorship. As formerly, they are held responsible afterward for what they send. The ordinary person's messages, however, and doubtless those of less known correspondents pass through censorship in the telegraph and cable offices. It is said to be lenient.

In Paris, Rome and Moscow, the American reporter telephones his uncensored news abroad but written dispatches theoretically pass through a censorship which seems to do little more than delay them while they are being read.

Budapest, central point for transmitting news from Hungary, Rumania, Yugoslavia and Bulgaria, is without censorship except for the Hungarian press. The four countries, like many others, have strict control of local newspapers but give freedom to foreign correspondents.

Occasionally, all communications are cut temporarily in some countries. This happened in Rumania Sept. 21 when Premier Calinescu was assassinated but not in time to prevent the news from going out promptly.

Wisconsin Health

BY DR. C. A. HARPER
State Health Officer

Travelers throughout the state have grown so accustomed to expecting certain accommodations from the hotels and other sleeping rooms that they little realize the great strides taken in health protection measures in the last quarter century.

One of these is the "long sheet." Few people know that the "fold back" over the blanket and the complete sheet coverage of the mattress are the results of a law passed by the Wisconsin legislature in 1913. Prior to the passage of this law specifying sleeping room equipment, bed coverings in transient places were only of the type that the proprietor considered sufficient.

In many cases the top sheet was only as long as the blanket, and because only the sheets were changed between occupants, the blanket became a carrier of colds and other communicable diseases. The under sheet, too, often did not cover the surface of the mattress, leaving the occupant the choice of pulling the sheet up and having his feet come in contact with the mattress or pulling it down and having his face exposed to the mattress.

The law specifies that the sheet be at least 96 inches long after being hemmed and laundered, which means that the cloth should be torn at least 108 inches in order to meet the required length. This "long sheet" provides the necessary coverage so that neither the feet nor the face need come in contact with anything but clean material. The long sheet, therefore, is not for long people, but for long life.

NOW IT'S MR. HEIL'S TURN

We surmise that the Governor has learned a good deal about Wisconsin's state government he didn't know when he was campaigning for office.

We guess that when he said he expected to cut state expenses by 15 million dollars he thought he could.

We conclude that a candid and complete statement from Mr. Heil ampled at explaining to the people in simple language why his expectations have never matured is not only in order but should be considered the obligation of a public servant who has been entrusted with a certain program which he has been unable to put into operation.

Nothing could be worse for the confidence people have in democratic government than to follow the example of the President who breaks his word easily and often. That sort of indifferent attitude toward public promises will bring the voters to the eventual point where they won't believe anyone. And that would create a condition fraught with all sorts of menaces to a government like ours. It may be popular to follow Mr. Roosevelt's lead. Many people consider it slick politics. But Mr. Heil shouldn't want to get conditions here in Wisconsin in such shape that nothing short of a war could save his face.

Our governor intimates that he is going to run again next year and that he is going to win. We think we can give him a prescription that will help him win. That prescription consists of a lucid statement to the people, admitting errors, pointing out difficulties, designating objectives. No soul was ever hurt by confession of error. Many men have gained the respect and admiration of those who oppose them by merely telling the truth instead of hiding or disguising it.

If Mr. Heil can make a presentable defense of his administration to date insofar as its financial policies are concerned he should do so.

If he cannot he may continue to ignore past representations.

FATHER COUGHLIN GETS THE GAG

The rule just created to exclude Father Coughlin from the air is another example of how difficult and trying cases created bad rulings.

The Code Committee gave evidence of one virtue, its candor. It merely drew up a rule so as to prevent one man from talking although it named two others of comparative insignificance to justify its stand.

We don't like Father Coughlin when he talks politics whether over the air or any other place. The very nature of his approach is hysterical. He has indicated, too, we believe, a ready willingness to use the most unhappy and medieval weapon known as intolerance.

But we have had men before in public life who could be readily compared to the gentleman whom Time aptly baptizes as the "Detroit Radiogogue" and they have gone their noisy ways until they disappeared over the horizon leaving naught but an echo that soon broke into discord.

The Code Committee first employed a rule compelling submission of broadcasts in advance. This was proper. It tended to eliminate any possible slander. It permitted the elimination too of graceless forms of speech or mean and grating charges that may fall short of slander. But this was not enough. Those involved want Father Coughlin's radio career. His voice, now jarring, now screaming, they would still.

But the millions who have no sympathy whatever with this political churchman will regret to see rules made or enforced whose aim is purely personal and vindictive.

BERGDOLL "NEVER THOUGHT OF THAT"

Bergdoll's pretentious defense, based upon the claim he had lived in America for seven years while a fugitive from justice, collapsed as completely as a web in a high wind before the attacks of a wide awake prosecutor.

If Bergdoll slipped in and out of this country what name did he use? What ports did he enter? Upon what steamers did he sail? Where did he buy his passage?

It was not a simple affair to go through all those shipping records to obtain the necessary data but the prosecutor waded through. When he had finished he was able to establish that instead of living here more than five years, the necessary length of time to make his point good Bergdoll had stayed here but a few days over a year.

Thus is an accused person, however blandly or beautifully he frames a defense, subjected to destruction when the government is represented by someone with a quick and vigilant mind. When Bergdoll finished his evidence upon this point he seemed to have created a formidable armor. His story was supported by the evidence of children, valuable and simple evidence, but children, though their candor may lend countenance to a story, are notably poor judges of time.

But the armor, burnished and glistening in the sun, was made of tin. It was ripped to pieces easily, handily and completely by records of which Bergdoll never thought when he told his story but which readily occurred to the man at the helm for the government.

There are still great public dividends in the choice of the wise and alert for the critical jobs.

RUSSIA'S FRIENDLY COUNTERFEIT-ING OF OUR MONEY

It may be remembered that a short time ago leading Communists admitted before the Dies committee that Moscow had established a bureau for the counterfeiting of American passports thus enabling its thousands of agents scattered throughout the world to produce proof, generally accepted at par, that they were nothing more than American citizens, probably millionaires, traveling peacefully for their health and enjoyment.

And now General Krivitsky, formerly of the Red army, supplements all this testimony with another of his accurate and documented articles in the Saturday Evening Post. Krivitsky establishes through some toothsome evidence that the Soviets not only counterfeited our passports but counterfeited our money. And thus he accounts for the torrent of bogus $100 bills that flooded the world not so many years ago and kept our secret service agents up many sleepless nights.

The American Secret Service not only suspected Russia at the time but nabbed one Russian agent and now have him on a 15-year term in an eastern prison. Krivitsky produces newspaper articles of the day headed "Flood of Fake Bills is Traced to Russia," but tracing something to Russia was not necessarily tracing it to the Kremlin.

The counterfeiting scheme originated in the Soviets' necessity. They started one of those 5-year plans through which they were bent upon making Russia as great as some of the civilized powers and when they couldn't pay for their purchases here because they had neither gold nor American exchange it was as natural for them to think of counterfeiting our money as it was for Dutch Schultz to shoot one who stood in his way. So they modestly brought forth 10 million dollars of American money in $100 bills, a beautiful counterfeit that passed inspection everywhere until it got to America. They even acquired the banking firm of Sass & Martini to assist them in the easy disposition of the money and the floods of it they expected to continue.

They did not reckon with their hosts, however. They did not realize that an American bank, as soon as it receives American money from abroad, puts it under a microscope. Our administration at Washington may be "easy money" for the Reds but American bankers are still no fools.

When the National City Bank of New York found $20,000 in such cleverly counterfeited money it knew something pretty vicious was afoot and cabled banks all over the world warning them. And so when bankers in Shanghai, Constantinople, Rome, Warsaw, Berlin and even Havana gave the American money in their tills the microscope they threw up their hands in rage because they had been taken in. Stalin justified his course by declaring that Napoleon when at war with England had counterfeited English bank notes. But a little knowledge is still a treacherous thing. Napoleon failed. And if that weren't enough, Russia wasn't at war with America as Napoleon was with England.

And so the job was dealt out to General Krivitsky to "liquidate" the smelly affair. How these Socialists love the word "liquidate." Liquidation to Krivitsky meant a scurrying of the spiders in every direction with the implication that possibly some criminal work had occurred but of course that the Moscow government had not participated in this final proof of criminality and gangsterism.

A Verse for Today

By Anne Campbell

DALE HARRISON'S In Old New York

New York—On the trains between Wheeling and New York there was much talk about business, especially about Steel; and the talk was enthusiastic. One salesman in the smoking room of our Pullman was complaining about the new problems confronting him.

"I'm having an awful time making excuses to buyers for our inability to fill orders promptly," he said. "For nine years I've had headaches trying to sell Steel, now my headache is getting enough to meet the demand."

An executive of a large independent Steel company told me: "There is nothing intangible about the boom in our business. The boom is real. War contracts have come along in large number, and shipments to fill them already have gone forward to Monterey, Mexico, from whence it is the buyer's problem to get the steel to its destination. But war contracts aren't the most cheerful note. Domestic demand is what is starting the furnaces glowing anew. It is the healthiest business we have seen in a decade."

And if you can just shut your minds to the knowledge that the demand, domestic and foreign, is largely soaking wet with men's blood, this boom in the American steel business should delight you no end.

Movies and War:

Talking with various movie executives here—and it is in New York that Hollywood's purse strings are held—I heard some interesting things. One film executive got so jittery when he broke out that he decided to put into effect a 20 cent pay cut right down the line. Before he got around to doing it, however, some sanity returned, and the result will be that this company will go through with its production schedule intact, including all its spectacle and million-dollar pictures.

Another film man made this observation about the effect of European war on the American movie industry.

"Hollywood and America owe their dominance in the picture business to the World War. Because of that war Germany, France and England which were well launched in picture making had to halt work at their studios. For four years—the most important years of movie making, 1914-18—America produced most of the world's cinemas. It was during that period, if you remember, that David Wark Griffith made 'The Birth of a Nation' which lifted pictures to the realm of art."

"The same thing can happen again. There is a great world market for movies even with Europe at war. Europe won't be able to compete for that market. England, France and Germany aren't going to waste time turning out movies. Hollywood, therefore, there's a war to be fought, Hollywood, therefore, can expect a business boom instead of a slump."

In the Card Room:

Add to the list of versatile New Yorkers the name of P. Hal Sims. Best known as one of the world's greatest bridge players, he has had high success in other fields. Many experts have called him one of the best poker players on earth. Twice he has been amateur champion of America at three-cushion billiards. Twice he has been runner-up in national amateur trapshooting. He plays golf in the low twenties. He will bet anyone on anything. His success at baccarat and chemin de fer at Monte Carlo has been phenomenal. The Monte Carlo casino was so impressed that it offered him two per cent of its profits if he would act as banker there—an offer he declined, for he plays only for fun. He once owned a stable of race horses, and during the world war he flew in the British Royal Flying Corps, being shot down and seriously wounded.

Music in the Air:

War or no, the venerable Arturo Toscanini, who has been called the greatest living musician, will inaugurate his third season as conductor of the NBC Symphony Orchestra October 14. Two series of Toscanini concerts will be offered, the first ending December 2, the second being given during the late winter and spring. Whether the 73-year-old Italian will follow his usual routine of returning to Italy between the two series of concerts is not known. It is possible that the complications of ocean travel due to the submarine may influence him to vacation in America instead.

If America should by any chance acquire a "strafe Deutschland" complex due to the European war and from upon German music as it did during the World War, Toscanini's programming may come in for sharp revision. He is a devotee of the music of two great German composers, Wagner and Beethoven. His two seasons with the NBC orchestra, however, have broadened the maestro's tolerance for modern composers, which may mean a wider variety of music this season, including more modern American music.

RICHES PUZZLE WOMAN

Mrs. Mary Smith, of Clogher, Northern Ireland, wonders what to do with the $150,000 inheritance which has come to her through the will of her half-brother, Robert Bromm, a New York railroad official. She is 64 and last saw her half-brother 50 years ago. She was sent to Ireland from the United States when a girl and married there. From time to time when she was young, she returned to the United States to visit Bromm. Mrs. Smith always expected that she would get the money if she survived her half-brother, but now that she has it she admits that she does not know just what to do with such a huge sum at her age.

A Bystander In Washington

Washington — Regardless of the source of the thundering noises off the coast of Norway, sea-going opinion here is that Germany's top-time battle fleet is something to be reckoned with.

There isn't enough sea power in the whole German navy to stand shoulder to shoulder with even one squadron of first line British vessels. But the German power does not lie in that direction. The threat is in the possibility that one of her battleships may get out into the open sea as a commerce raider. Instantly it would multiply British commerce problems, sky-rocket insurance, and make the mistress of the seas a very ruffled matron indeed.

Toy-like as some of the German ships are, there are only three ships in the British navy that can touch any of five German ships in a running fight in the open sea.

The net result would be that so long as the German ship remained at large, the convoy system would have to be conducted by Britain's heaviest fighters instead of her light destroyers. And every such fighter turned loose on the ocean would be subjected to multiple risks of destruction by submarine.

It works this way:

How It Looks

The German vessels, including the three pocket battleships and the two heavier cruisers, are Germany's pride and joy. They broke away from Versailles restrictions, can outrun the British navy's heaviest battleships. In a shoulder-to-shoulder battle, the British ships would win every time. But the German ships could run away, and be free to prey on lighter members of the fleet or on commerce.

The pocket battleships can do 26 knots or better. The heavy British battleships can do only 23 to 24. The two heavier German ships, approximately 25,000-ton cruisers, can turn on 31 knots or better.

British light or heavy cruisers could overtake any of the five, but that would be suicide. The pocket battleships carry 11-inch guns and, in a running battle, could put fire on the British cruisers long before they could come in striking range with their 6-inch or 8-inch guns. The heavier German ships could do even better. They are armored heavily enough to engage in hull-to-hull combat with ordinary cruisers and their 11-inch guns would spell ruin to them.

In the whole British navy there are only three ships that can accomplish the double task of running down the five German ships and shelling them into submission. They are the fast battle cruisers Hood, Renown and Repulse. Armed with 15-inch guns, a speed of 31 knots and carrying 9 to 12-inch armor, they could destroy any of the German ships.

Nazis Could Afford It

Once out in the open sea, the German ships could easily pass over the usual convoy of destroyers guarding herds of 30 to 60 merchant vessels. Then it would be a matter of a mad wolf among the sheep. Shell fire from the German ship might put down a dozen or more merchant vessels before they could scatter.

Strategists here have been expending, ever since the war started, that Germany would make a break for freedom with one of the potent commerce destroyers. She could afford to sacrifice several light cruisers to get one of the battleships through the British North Sea patrol.

Once one was out, the British would have to detach at least one of its three battle cruisers to hunt it down. Its effective North Sea blockade against further outbreaks of German ships would be weakened by that much. Out on the open ocean, the German ships could provision themselves from raids on commerce, just as did the romantic Emden of World war time. Britain paid early for that escape.

Just a Step Behind the News

With Hitler on the air again, I guess we will all have to have the repair crews up again to gather up the pieces and fix the radio set.

This looks like a war of loud-speakers. Both sides keep shifting their microphonic batteries into the front lines and throwing their heaviest voices at the enemy. Both sides are going to suffer heavy losses vocally in this conflict.

You can't listen to Hitler hinting at peace and not be certain it's him and not Bill McKeechne. I know Bill ain't got such a shrill voice, but he must be just as hysterical at the moment.

As an innocent bystander, I would think the series was over, but it seems they are going to go through with it on the ground of commitments, agreements and contracts. This makes the Yanks and the Reds the only two fellows paying any attention to such things these days.

I see where a Berlin news agency says that Germany may consider herself freed of her promise to respect Belgian neutrality because the enemy planes have flown over that country. The Nazi propaganda ministry denied it. But I am glad I do not live in Belgium.

There is only one place where I would feel in greater danger. That would be on the Cincinnati baseball club.

San Jose, Calif. (AP)—Old quicksilver workings in California received a stimulus when outbreak of war brought a quick rise in price.

WHILE THE HIRED HELP IS BUSY WITH OUR FOREIGN POLICY

Under the Capital Dome

BY JOHN WYNGAARD

Madison — Many persons think that Fred R. Zimmerman is exaggerating somewhat when he tells public audiences of his belief that Governor Heil decided to set up a new motor vehicle bureau, and thus remove automobile licensing from Zimmerman's department, because the governor was annoyed at reports that Zimmerman would run for governor next year.

The secretary of state overlooks the fact that the motor vehicle bureau legislation was generally praised by those who have anything to do with the departments which consolidate. Such centralization has been urged for many years, but the Heil administration is the first which has seen fit to act.

MR. DAMANN BALKED

There was nothing especially original about the new motor vehicle reorganization act. Progressives in 1937, when they were reorganizing the capitol, thought of it, but the desire of their wheelhorse in the secretary of state's office, Theodore Dammann, to retain control over the distribution of auto license plates stopped them.

Mr. Zimmerman complains now just as Mr. Dammann would have complained two years ago had he lost the licensing division. It is commonly accepted that the secretary of state's office is attractive not only because there is little work to do, but also because the publicity value of having your name printed in huge black letters on hundreds of thousands of pieces of mail which go to almost every voter in the state is not to be scorned.

And Mr. Zimmerman mourns that there is nothing left for him to do, now that the licensing function has been removed.

Were he to tell all he knows about that office during several terms spent in it, he would add that there never was anything to do by a secretary of state who wanted it so. His duties, and those of the state treasurer, are purely administrative routine. Both could leave their offices for weeks at a time, and some of their predecessors did—and the regular civil service help would carry on so that no one would notice the difference.

That is why—and the office of the attorney general could be added in the observation—many political scientists have repeatedly criticized the practice of including such offices on the elective party ballot. Whatever work there is for such officers to do is laid out for him by legislative decree. There is rarely a question of policy. So the places could be just as effectively and probably more cheaply be filled by permanent civil service appointees.

ZIM'S CANDIDACY

As for Zimmerman's reported candidacy for the governorship, there is no one who knows anything about that except Zimmerman himself. But the secretary of state can expect that his name will continue to be mentioned as a possible, or even a likely, contender.

There is an old rule in politics and office-holding that the man is rare who surrenders a public place voluntarily. Generally an office is surrendered only to seek a higher one.

It was so with Zimmerman. He was once governor, and he was previously secretary of state. He was the latter to get the former. And he did not willingly retire

Personal Health Talks

WHY DRAG IN TOOTHACHE?

Ponderous volumes on the care of the teeth mention toothache only as a remote effect of neglect. In an epitome on the subject one can't dismiss toothache so lightly.

Decay or cavity formation may progress as far as involvement of the pulp in the center of the tooth before the child feels more than tenderness or slight sensitivity to hot or cold liquids or to candy or other sweets. Unconsciously the child favors the sensitive side of the mouth and gets into the habit of chewing on one side of the mouth, which still further predisposes the teeth on the unused side to decay.

Actual toothache means inflammation in the pulp if the ache becomes throbbing, abscess occurs—suppuration, and destruction of the pulp. The pulp is not only the nerve structure but what is more important the vascular structure whence the tooth is nourished, chiefly.

If a cavity can be seen, packing it lightly with a wisp of cotton saturated with oil of cloves may give relief. If this does not give relief, the dentist may be able to find the opening into the pulp chamber, enlarge it a bit and afford vent to the blood or pus congested or under pressure therein, thus bringing immediate relief.

If abscess develops, commonly called "ulcerated tooth," the face swells over the damaged tooth and the throbbing pain destroys all sleep or peace until the abscess is drained. The victim may have some fever, with or without chills, if the proper treatment is put off too many hours.

If the abscess "points" on the gum, of course the immediate "lancing" of the "gum boil" is always advisable.

If the suppuration is confined within the pulp chamber or within the tooth socket, relief can be given either by immediate extraction of the tooth or, if the dentist believes the tooth may still serve a useful purpose, by draining the abscess thru the root canal or thru the pulp chamber. The quant procedure of ignorant practitioners in the past and some quacks today, of postponing surgical interference until "the inflammation has gone down" is malpractice. The danger from "ulcerated tooth" ends with drainage of the abscess, however this may be brought about. The damage sometimes caused by unwarranted delay in surgical treatment has too often been ignorantly or viciously charged to the treatment. Unfortunately the courts of Yankeeeland share the ignorance of the public about this. A reasonable amount of ignorance may be excusable, but only a veritable fool would suffer "ulcerated tooth" for days and nights when there is a twentieth century dentist within reach. Aside from the mere pain, there is the certainty that with every hour the trouble is permitted to go unrelieved the damage to the system or to the jaw bone is increasing and so is the danger.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

The Baby Goes to School

If I send my daughter to school this year (she is 5 years old) she from the governorship, he was defeated after only one term.

It is natural that he should be looking toward the second term which so many Wisconsin governors were accorded. Moreover, he readily admits that he likes office, would like to continue being elected. So he shouldn't be surprised when politicians talk about the probability that he covets the governorship again, nor when the newspapers pick up such discussions.

will be in a class with other children. If I wait until next year she will be in a class all alone. She is strong and healthy. Should I send her now or wait a year? (Mrs. N. J.)

Answer—Provided she has been immunized against diphtheria and against smallpox, send her now. Young children derive advantages from earlier association with other children in school. But it would be an unforgivable negligence to expose her to the possible risk of diphtheria or smallpox in any circumstance.

More Than Ever Before

What has become of those excellent booklets you used to offer correspondents for a dime, on such subjects as Indigestion, Constipation, Anemia, Rheumatism, etc.? Have you gone high hat on us poor folk? (M. C.)

Answer—There are more such booklets in the "Little Lessons" series than ever before: CVD, So You Have Indigestion? Preparing for Maternity, The Last Brady Symphony (keep fit exercises), Care of the Feet, Ills Called Rheumatism, Unbidden Guests, V-I-T-E Spells Youth, Blood and Health, Constipation Habit and Colon Hygiene. For copy of any booklet send ten cents coin and 1-cent-stamped envelope bearing your address.

Ensalinas

Recipe for ensalinas, corn, cooking only twenty minutes and adding a tablespoonful of borax acid to each quart of corn, to insure against spoiling. (Mrs. A.K.C.)

Answer—Id rather go hungry than eat food so embalmed. If the food is pure, fresh and not carelessly or roughly handled before processing, the cooking or pressure sterilization should be sufficient to preserve it without any chemical treatment. Otherwise it would be better not to try to eat the food.

Foreign Protein Treatment

Have heard of milk injections for relief of arthritis pain—it is said to give relief lasting for months in some cases, though not a cure. Would appreciate any information you may give about this. Wife has been a sufferer for four years. (H.C.A.)

Answer—Injection of any foreign protein—that is, any nitrogenous material other than that absorbed through the normal digestive route—may give more or less relief in arthritis of chronic or long-standing type. Only way to find out is by having your doctor try it cautiously.

Tattoo Marks

Inclosed stamp envelope. Please send information on removal of tattoo marks—as given in article in your column some time ago. (W.M.C.)

Answer—Agents a physician might safely use for obliterating or removing such mutilations would be too dangerous for laymen to use. On his request your physician may have any information I can give him.

Chocolate Milk Shake

Stenographer takes only a chocolate milk shake for lunch every day. She eats a good breakfast and dinner, and thinks this is enough for her. (E. B. M.)

Answer—Perhaps it is enough, if the other two meals are well balanced.

The present school building is the fourth structure in which children of Zion Lutheran church have attended classes. The "cradle of Zion school" was a store building on Onida street near Washington street in which a parochial school was opened in 1893 with both English and German being taught. Beginning with an enrollment of 20 children with Mrs. Pauline Weissgerber conducting classes until a regular teacher could be called, the school grew so rapidly that larger quarters had to be arranged.

On the site of the present parsonage a 2-story school building was erected which also served as living quarters for the pastor and his assistant. The new school was dedicated Nov. 30, 1895, and the Rev. Adam Stumpf was the first duly called teacher. Soon after a second teacher was called to take charge of the growing enrollment. That building served the congregation as school until 1899 when a larger building had to be erected to accommodate the children. Classes were held there until 1929 when the present structure was built and dedicated.

Zion parish school has eight grades using the same books and following the same program as the public schools. Four teachers conduct the classes. Only English is taught now, German having been

Still Argue Over Leading Of Singleton

From time immemorial arguments have raged around the value of the singleton leads. Many years ago the largest school of players vociferously maintained that the lead of a singleton was the next thing to suicide. Gradually, over the years, this school has diminished in numbers, until today only a few diehards have the temerity to voice the old battle cry. But, even now, there are thousands of players who do not appreciate the true potentialities of short suit leads. Particularly when they have control of the trump suit, they look on the lead of a singleton with great disfavor, their theory being, I suppose, that they can lead singleton at any time before losing their trump control. Unfortunately for them, they have partners to contend with. When a certain suit is not led originally, said partners find it difficult to believe that the subsequent lead can be a singleton. Note the defensive tragedy that resulted from the misunderstanding in the following hand:

Neither side vulnerable.

NORTH		EAST
♠ 7 4	♥ 10 8 7	♠ 10 8 7	♥ 10 8 7
♦ 3	♣ 10 7 4	♦ 3	♣ 10 7 4
♠ A K Q 9 5	♥ A 8 3	♠ A K Q 9 5	♥ A 8 3

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
Pass	1 club	Pass	1 diamond
2 spades	3 clubs	5 spades	4 diamonds
4 spades	Double	Pass	Pass

South, having passed originally, felt that his playing strength was worth a jump overall, hence his two spade bid over East's one diamond. North, although holding only the ace and one spade, correctly figured his general strength great enough to justify a raise and, after that, North-South hardly could stay out of a game.

West, with four spades to the king, decided that there was no need to open a singleton diamond, hence laid down the club king, following with the queen. Declarer ruffed the second round and took the spade finesse. Then, when East showed out, he led low to the spade ace. (Naturally enough, West did not cover the spade queen.) A low heart now was led to the king and the spade jack was led. West took his king and, since declarer had been found to hold so many trumps that forces would not bother him, shifted to his singleton diamond. East won with the ace and declarer carefully false-carded by playing the eight. Parly on this evidence, but mostly because West had failed to open a diamond originally, East was certain that the diamond deuce suit was in West's hand and that West had put him (East) on lead, so that he could return a club up to dummy, thereby giving West the chance to win the trick if declarer ducked, or to play a low card if declarer ruffed. On that analysis, East did return a club and an amazing result developed. Declarer ruffed and drew West's last trump. This left the position as follows:

NORTH

♦ 9	♣ 3

WEST

♠ None	♥ 10 8
♦ Q 7	♣ J
♠ A 9	♥ None

SOUTH

♠ 9	♥ 5
♦ K 2	♣ None
♠ None	♥ None

Declarer now laid down the spade nine and the defenders were "in the soup." West let go the club nine, and the diamond nine was discarded from dummy. East had to hold the Q-J of diamonds, hence had to reduce to the singleton ten of hearts. Now declarer laid down the diamond king and it was West's turn to be hit by the steam roller. He could not discard his club ace without establishing dummy's club jack, hence had to relinquish his heart jack. Now, with both defenders down to one heart, declarer could lead his five spot and go up with the ace, dropping West's queen and East's ten together and establishing the heart six for the fulfilling trick.

THE HOME GARDENER

Before frost has nipped the water-lily leaves, water has generally cooled enough to cause the growth of tropical water lilies to desert. If you will remember, tropical water lilies cannot be set out in spring before the water warms nor will they continue to grow after the

GOOD THINGS FOR THE HOME
Marie Schneider's Tested Recipes

TODAY'S MENU

Mention lamb for dinner and most of us think automatically of roast leg of lamb or chops. And that's all very delicious, but the less expensive cuts such as shoulder of lamb can be just as savory. The shoulder of lamb, because it is less in demand, is usually an economical buy which will please all thrifty homemakers. The reason is that it contains a bone which makes

Miss Schneider carving difficult. One way to get around this difficulty is to have this shoulder bone removed at the market.

The boned shoulder can be rolled into a compact, easily carved roast. Carving a rolled shoulder roast is a simple matter. By slicing it downward, one cuts across the grain, as meat should be cut.

Roll shoulder of lamb is roasted the same as leg of lamb.

The Menu

Roll shoulder of Lamb
Mint Jelly
Mashed Potatoes
Spinach a la Bechamel
Chocolate Velvet Cream
Spinach a la Bechamel

1 lb. spinach
4 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons flour
1 cup hot milk

Hard boiled eggs, sliced

Remove roots from spinach and carefully pick over discarding decayed leaves, wash in several waters to be sure it is free from all sand. Put the spinach in a large kettle without water. Let cook slowly, until some of the juice is drawn out, then boil about 15 minutes or until tender. Drain and chop very fine. Add salt. Melt the butter in a saucepan. Remove from fire and mix with flour. Cook until it bubbles, then gradually add milk and boil stirring constantly until the mixture thickens. Add spinach. Reheat and garnish with hard boiled eggs, sliced.

Chocolate Velvet Cream

1 package lime flavored gelatin
1 pint hot water
5 teaspoons vinegar or lemon juice
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup apples, diced
4 olives, chopped
1 cup crisp cabbage, shredded
1 cup crisp cabbage, in hot water

Add vinegar or lemon juice and salt. Chill. When slightly thickened, fold in apples, cabbage and olives. Turn into molds. Chill until firm. Unmold. Serve with mayonnaise. Serves 6.

Chocolate Velvet Cream

1 square chocolate
1 cup milk
1 tablespoon granulated gelatin
1 cup sugar
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup whipping cream
1 teaspoon vanilla

Add chocolate to 1 cup milk and heat in double boiler. Soak gelatin in remaining 1 cup milk 5 minutes. When chocolate is melted, beat with rotary egg beater until blended. Add gelatin, sugar and salt and stir until gelatin is dissolved. Cool. Add cream and vanilla. Chill until cold and syrupy. Place in bowl of ice or ice water and whip with rotary egg beater until fluffy and thick like whipped cream. Turn into mold. Chill only until firm. Unmold. Garnish with whipped cream. Serves 4 to 6.

WEDDING CLOTHES NOT ALWAYS ALIKE

Dear Mrs. Post: There must be one exception when the groom and his best man are not required to dress alike. How about the wedding of an army man who is wearing his uniform, but whose best man and ushers are not army men? What would they wear?

Answer: You are quite right. This is an exception. They wear their formal civilian clothes. Since the reason for this difference in appearance is obvious, it is always overlooked.

"LADY" OR "WOMAN"?

Dear Mrs. Post: I am a reception clerk in a large office, and when I call one of the men in the office to say that there is some one to see him, which is correct? "There is a lady waiting to see you" or "There is a woman waiting to see you"? And of course this applies to the words "man" and "gentleman" too. Thank you so much for answering this question.

Answer: It is always more polite to say "There is a lady waiting to see you." It is also more polite to say "There is a gentleman waiting to see you."

AFTERNOON TEA SERVICE

Dear Mrs. Post: Please tell me which way is proper. At a tea, does the lady pouring hand the filled cup on its saucer to the waiting guest, or after the cup has been prepared does the waiting guest reach down and pick it up herself?

Answer: The hostess lifts it toward the waiting guest, who comes forward to receive it.

ENGAGEMENT PARTIES

Dear Mrs. Post: How soon after her engagement is announced is it suitable for a young woman's friends to give showers and other parties in her honor. The friend I refer to particularly is not being married for almost a year, and some of us feel that it is as yet too soon to start giving parties for her.

Answer: Engagement parties are given as soon as the engagement is announced. Showers are given at about the time the invitations to the wedding are sent.

Brother - Sister Differences
Usually Ironed Out With Time

BY ANGELO PATRI
Bruce is eleven and his sister Agnes is ten. Since the day that Bruce saw his sister clearly has done what he could to make her life miserable. If she looks at him he makes a hideous face, rolling his eyes, sticking out his tongue, wagging his hands by his ears for finer effects. Agnes flatters him by bursting into tears.

Whenever Agnes speaks her mind before other children Bruce informs them that she is a goose, a silly, a dumb Dora, and to pay no heed to her. He completes his contribution to his sister's unhappiness by making a series of noises like a Zoo on the rampage, all the time making faces at her. More tears.

At home he shoves her aside every time he gets the chance. Father and mother are alert to help Agnes, but Bruce is usually ahead of them. Agnes turns on the radio. Immediately Bruce has to study, or practice, or has a severe headache that clears like magic once the radio has been turned off. Then he turns on his program. Agnes seldom complains about it and father and mother seldom catch him at it.

"Why do you cry for him?" they demand. "Why don't you pay him back in his own coin once in a while? If you did he would not be so ready to bother you. Stop crying and get after him. Hold your own." But Agnes shakes her head and weeps. Not for the world will she hit back, or complain, nor cease to love her tormentor.

But there is hope. One afternoon when the streets were full of children returning from school, Agnes and another little girl were walking toward home in the close intimacy that little school girls enjoy so much. Two lads, bigger than they, ran into them, pushed them off their feet, snatched their hats and kicked their books into the gutter, having a good time.

A thrashing whirlwind, seemingly out of nowhere descended on the two young bandits. It knocked their heads together, pushed them toward home in the close intimacy that little school girls enjoy so much. Two lads, bigger than they, ran into them, pushed them off their feet, snatched their hats and kicked their books into the gutter, having a good time.

"Pick up your things, you two. Wonder you wouldn't look where you were going. Walk ahead of me. And don't snivel. Nobody hurt you." That was brother Bruce, too.

Brothers are funny animals, even the best of them. They seem to think that sisters are born for their special penance. Many of them feel their brotherly responsibility so keenly that they watch every movement their sisters make in an agony of fear lest they do something to disgrace them. Sisters showing off, failing in lessons or sports, attracting unfavorable notice of other boys is so painful to brothers that they appear merciless when they are only fearfully embarrassed.

By and by this all passes over. If the parents are wise and understanding they keep directing the boy by instruction and example to a better understanding of his sister. Sister, in time, goes the rest of the way. It is very trying while it lasts, but it does end happily most of the time.

Mr. Patri will give personal attention to inquiries from parents and school teachers on the care and development of children. Write him in care of this paper, enclosing a three-cent stamped, addressed envelope for reply.

Beauty and You

by PATRICIA LINDSAY

All of us want to be stylish yet comfortable and about the only way we can be both today is to attain a figure whose natural lines are nipped in at the waist, softly curved over the hips and attractively full in the bosom! A pretty tough order for some of us, to say the least, but where there is will there is a way!

Thousands of women are flocking to the salons for quick figure re-fashioning. These women have dieted so strenuously and find themselves flat front and back, want to regain weight and curves. Those who relied on the styles staying as comfortably as they had for the past four years want to slim down to trimness. Most of the women do not want to be harassed into corsets (just as last year they objected to the high hair-dos) so they are taking the hardest way to figure perfection. They have determined to exercise! Inches off one's waist seems to be the most important figure problem. And this cheers beauty editors. Why? Because if a woman exercises to slim her midriff she is at the same time exercising to make all of her more beautiful.

Age begins to tell with the thickened waist. Thinness, with the appearance of rubber tires; So my dears if you concentrate on exercises which will slim your waist it is all right by me! In fact I'll encourage you by giving you these movements to work with!

Start Lying Down

Lie on your back and stretch all you can. Stretch and yawn. Now bend your knees and bring them up toward your chest. Keep all of these up for one month and you can discard that uncomfortable corset you just spent your good money on!

undue amount of maternal devotion.

The Commonest "Triangle"

The most common "triangle" which causes domestic unhappiness involves two women and a man. One of these women is his mother while the other is his sweetheart or wife.

A man of 33 who has never married, usually has two strikes called on his chances of marital success, anyway, for he is pretty well set in his bachelor ways and has paid undivided allegiance to mamma for a decade longer than is true of the average man today.

Besides, he is likely to be sexually weak or addicted to self-sex practices, for a normal red-blooded male usually feels the romantic attraction for the female and has found his mate long before the age of 33.

Molly should start dating other men. This will give her a wider range of marriage merchandise from which to select quality stuff, and it may dynamite Charley out of his complacency.

MODEST SEQUINS

Paris (T)—Sequins are hiding their light in a modest way. A black afternoon frock in Patou's collection has the bodice front overlaid with sequins, veiled with black georgette. Each sequin is wrapped in a little georgette cover. Multi-color paillettes in an evening blouse, shine through an overblouse of pleated tulle, another veiling notion from the same source.

You are not only doing the worst thing possible under the circumstances, but the most idiotic thing a woman could do, because you are adding the final touch of gloom to a picture that is dark enough as it stands.

It is unfortunate for you that you have fallen in love with a married man.

Don't Sear Your Soul

Dear Miss Dix—I am a woman of 42. Attractive and full of life. Have a wonderful position where I am happy and well paid. I have agreed to marry a widower 65 years old, who has money and a shady business past. We have nothing in common intellectually or otherwise. I do not love him, but think I can make a go of it if I marry him. On the other hand, I am dreadfully in love with my employer, who loves me, but we cannot marry. So I am marrying to get out of an impossible situation. Please tell me if I am doing the right thing. FLORENCE.

It isn't enough for a wife for her husband merely to do his duty by her in the way of being faithful and a good provider and kind. She can't stay her soul on such husks of affection as that. She wants the strong meat and wine of a love that expresses itself in caresses, in kisses, in the warm, glowing flabby as yesterday's pancakes. And above all, she wants words. She wants to be told every day of her life in burning, sizzling words how her husband adores her and that to him she is the most beautiful and wonderful woman in the world.

Every woman knows that to a wife the success of a marriage depends not upon what her husband is, nor what he gives her, but upon the kind of a lovermaker he is. Every woman knows that a man may be a pillar of the church and a model in the community, and that he may lavish fine man, but marrying a man whom you neither respect nor love and with whom you have nothing in common is not a cure for that. It is simply jumping out of the frying pan into the fire, and your last estate will be far worse than your first. You say that you think you could make a go of such a marriage, but your business sense should tell you better than that. You wouldn't invest even a thousand dollars in an enterprise for which you had neither taste nor training nor experience and in which your partner would be a man whom you knew to be a crook. Why, then, be foolish enough to put everything you are and have in a marriage in which the

Heaney Appears In Band Benefit Program Oct. 12

Magician, High School Musicians to Entertain In Auditorium

Heaney, master magician, will bring his tricks and his varied and elaborate equipment to Appleton High school auditorium Thursday evening, Oct. 12.

The Appleton High school band, under the direction of E. C. Moore will present a half-hour concert on the same program with Heaney, the proceeds going into the band benefit fund for new uniforms.

At 4:30 Thursday afternoon, Oct. 12, the band will parade in full uniform down College avenue. Heaney will be there with his vanishing horse, one of the many wonders of his show. The magician was a co-worker of Houdini, one of the greatest magicians of all time.

Heaney is accustomed to open his performances with some of his "simpler" tricks, such as making a bouquet of flowers appear at will from nowhere. He gradually progresses into his more intricate illusions, keeping up a running fire of comment. He produces ducks from thin air and catches doves with a dip net.

The ghost phase of his performance is opened with spirit writing on two slates held by a small boy from the audience. Among his most amazing illusions is making a small, solid ball float through the air and obey his commands. He also teases his audience into believing that he can make a woman float through the air without any visible means of support at all.

Heaney's repertoire includes 25 numbers. The finale of his program is usually Alov, the floating lady, who has been known to move directly over the heads of her audience. Although Heaney asserts that 90 per cent of spiritualism is "tricks," he does not disavow its possible powers. He claims for himself the ability to hypnotize.

Long-Continued Fatigue Should Not be Ignored, Doctors Warn

Madison—"Long-continued fatigue should not be ignored," warns the state medical society in its health bulletin today.

"Fatigue is inevitable. It is the warning of nature that the time has arrived when the physical organism requires some measure of respite in order to be able to resume activity without impairment of efficiency. Fatigue may be purely physical, or it may affect and involve the cerebral centers, which are the higher processes of mental activity. It may be acute or chronic, and if it falls into the former of these two types, one may expect complete recovery after rest. "Too often, fatigue which is long continued and somewhat chronic is ignored by the average person; and when not given due attention, it frequently results in severe and prolonged complications, which may disturb one's entire life and personality. Fatigue may be either the cause or the effect of certain disease conditions; but it is as the cause that the most important relationships exist in regard to the psychological changes which can result from chronic fatigue.

Lack of Varieties

"Lack of variation in one's work may cause an undue amount of fatigue in a person performing a simple task. It is the unbroken routine of performing the same tasks without interruption which causes the diminution of efficiency rather than the total amount of energy used. The value of short recesses has been observed in many businesses, and provision has been made for midmorning and mid-afternoon rest intervals, with a consequent increase in efficiency following them.

"Headache and eyestrain are common among the symptoms producing fatigue. The inability to concentrate, increasing irritability and moodiness are also notable. The tendency to worry a great deal over trivial matters or to exhibit undue emotion toward simple situations is characteristic of the onset of nervous fatigue.

"Fatigue may produce neurotic symptoms in an otherwise normal person. It may also cause aggravation of neurotic traits that are not manifest when the patient is rested. Thus a normal person may stammer and exhibit other nervous preoccupations.

Need Physical Work

"Perhaps one of the most costly effects of emotional outbursts is the resulting fatigue. Hard physical work sometimes provides an excellent outlet for repressed emotion. "To prevent the onset of conditions of fatigue, a few simple rules should be followed; for example,

1. Establish a limit of activity compatible with your age, physical and mental endowment, and work at this level to the best of your best ability.

2. During sleep and rest, conditions which will best permit complete relaxation should be assured. The importance of good ventilation is great, and a comfortable bed, preferably a single one, is extremely important.

3. Regular exercise, even of mild character, is recommended to every one. Exercise seems to favor the storage of blood sugar.

4. The importance of an appropriate allotment of time for rest, work, and play cannot be stressed too strongly."

See More Cotton Belt Bans on Milk Produce

Memphis, Tenn.—The National Cotton council yesterday interpreted the Georgia welfare department's ban on Wisconsin dairy products as the first of "a probable series" of retaliatory measures by the cotton belt against the dairying states.

The council's statement referred to an order from Braxwell Deen, Georgia welfare director, instructing the Federal Surplus Commodity corporation to quit distributing Wisconsin dairy products to Georgians on relief. Deen said Wisconsin's tax serves as a virtual ban on margarine, which is a major outlet for cottonseed oil.

Last month Oscar Johnston, president of the council, forecast that cotton states would soon start retaliating against states erecting trade barriers against cotton products.

Rubenstein to Give Recital Here April 15

ARTHUR RUBINSTEIN, who has been praised by critics the world over, will present a piano recital on the Community Artist Series April 15 at Memorial chapel. The series will open with the appearance of Gladys Swarthout Oct. 30.

Commitments throughout the world took Rubinstein away from the United States for 10 years, but he returned two years ago for a limited engagement of seven weeks, playing 15 recitals. Last season American audiences recalled him for 45 concerts in 13 weeks.

Guest soloist with most of the great symphony orchestras, the pianist was invited by the New York Philharmonic society to appear at three concerts in Carnegie hall toward the end of his stay last March.

After visiting his children in Paris, he took a plane to make his first tour of South Africa. This journey marked his conquest of the entire globe. In a little more than a quarter of a century, this great pianist has rolled up a record mileage of more than a million.

Four years ago, his wife accompanied him on a tour of Japan. They boarded the Trans-Siberian railway at Paris, which took two weeks to span the great Asiatic continent.

Tickets for the concert are on sale at Belling's Drug store. Other numbers on the series will be Donald Dickson, baritone; the Stradivarius String Quartet of New York; and the Lawrence College choir, under the direction of Dean Carl J. Waterman.

Woman Dies After Removal From Iron Lung to Bear Baby

Chicago—Mrs. Gertrude Epstein, 22, who gave birth to a baby girl yesterday during a brief time she was removed from an "iron lung" respirator, died today at Mt. Sinai hospital.

She succumbed to what Dr. A. I. Doktorsky described as "heart paralysis." Hospital attendants said the 64 pound baby was "doing well."

Mrs. Epstein, an infantile paralysis victim, was removed from a full-length respirator and taken to the delivery room while fire department rescue squad administered artificial respiration, aided by a light, portable respirator borrowed from Fred S. Snite, Jr., the young man who has lived in an "iron lung" for 34 years.

Medical records showed only 11 known cases of an infantile paralysis complication in pregnancy and no other case where a respirator was used at delivery.

Plan Program for Fire Prevention Week in Appleton

Observance Opens Sunday. Under Sponsorship Of Junior Chamber

The Appleton Junior Chamber of Commerce will be the official sponsor of Appleton's Fire Prevention week, which opens Sunday, the organization opening its campaign today by distributing 7,000 home inspection blanks to school children.

The blanks contain information on what fire hazards are found in homes, where to locate them, and how to eliminate them.

The United States Junior Chamber of Commerce is sponsoring Fire Prevention week nationally. Highlight of the Appleton observance will be a banquet at the Conway hotel at 6:30 Monday night at which Max Weaver, Green Bay manager of the Western Adjustment and Inspection company, will be the principal speaker.

Roy McNeil, Jace chairman, said this morning that more than 100 people are expected to attend the banquet, among them Mayor John Goodland, Jr., and several other city officials. Mayor Goodland and George P. McGillan, fire chief, are scheduled to deliver radio talks over the Appleton station Monday, the time to be announced tomorrow.

McNeil said this morning that the Jaces have arranged to have stickers calling attention to Fire Prevention week pasted on store windows and that several merchants will present displays.

Other members of the Jace committee are Harvey Sackett, G. J. Harter, James Van Rooy, Herbert Wichmann, and Harold Finger.

Chicago Fire Anniversary
October 9 is the anniversary of America's biggest and most costly fire, that which reduced a large portion of Chicago to ashes in 1871.

Louis Luebke, city electrical inspector, pointed out today that Fire Prevention week should remind residents to examine electrical wiring and appliances for any flaws that might start a fire.

Among suggestions that Luebke made were the following:
Lamp sockets which have broken keys or pull chains which no longer work and switches that fail to make proper contact should be replaced.

If temporary extensions to wiring have been made with flexible cords, and they have been left for permanent use, they should be removed and a safer type of wiring installed.

Attachment and extension cords in the house should be examined for hazard due to damage or wear.
The blowing of fuses should not be looked upon as an unfortunate occurrence, but as an important signal that some unsafe condition has arisen. The faulty equipment should be removed. When fuses blow out, the circuit is frequently overloaded. Either a few number of appliances should be used or a new circuit installed.

Opponents of Bill Offer to Support Revised Measure from carrying war supplies to a belligerent.

"As for me," Downey asserted, "I am firmly set against any further intervention in Europe by the sale of war materials there in peacetime or war."

Let us not help attack the peoples of another continent. Let us attack our own tasks at home."

Besides ending the embargo, the administration's neutrality bill would put this country's commerce with belligerents on a virtual "cash and carry" basis and establish other controls over shipping and travel in an effort to prevent "incidents" with either side.

Downey proposed this slogan for opponents of embargo repeal: "For the Americas, both North and South, billions for defense but not a single son for butchery abroad."

Thomas, who helped draft the embargo repeal legislation, was the day's first speaker in the senate neutrality issue.

"We are considering this legislation with but a single objective," he declared, "and that is to keep the United States out of war."

Taking issue with Senator Borah (R-Idaho), Thomas contended that repeal of the embargo would not be contrary to international law.

"We are considering today domestic law," he said. "The proposal is one of adding restraints to American citizens and American property and American ships."

(Besides repealing the embargo, the legislation would prohibit American ships from carrying any goods to belligerents, would bar American citizens and ships from combat zones, and would require

California Woman Is Given Divorce Decree

Vadella Newland, San Francisco, Cal., was granted a divorce from Lawrence Newland, 127 S. Pierce street, by Judge Thomas H. Ryan in municipal court this morning. She charged cruel and inhuman treatment. She was given the custody of a minor child, $25 per month for its support and $15 per month alimony. The couple was married Sept. 25, 1926, and separated in January this year.

Barbour to Back Bill

Thomas said there was no experience in history in which a major nation ever had created an embargo for the same purpose as that approved by congress in 1937.

But he added that he did not see how anyone could contend, as he said Borah had, that repeal would constitute intervention in the European war.

Advocates of repealing the arms embargo today gained another Republican vote—that of Senator Barbour of New Jersey—as opposition leaders continued to dispute claims of a "substantial majority" for the legislation.

The opponents also announced that a substitute neutrality bill retaining the embargo and providing a strict "cash and carry" system for all other trade with belligerents was being framed by unidentified senators.

Vote in Two Weeks
A final vote was not expected before two more weeks of debate, although some administration lieutenants said it might come sooner.

Senator Barbour, who had been listed as doubtful on the embargo issue, said in a statement that he would vote for the administration bill because he believed it was less likely to get the United States into war.

This announcement followed a radio speech in support of the administration bill by Henry L. Simson, former Republican secretary of state, Stimson urged repeal in order to aid Great Britain and France, lest the war "in case they are beaten... become our own battle."

Barbour was the sixth of the 23 Republican senators to advocate repeal. The others are Austin and Gibson of Vermont, Taft of Ohio, Hale of Maine, and Reed of Kansas. Along with them, 15 Democrats and one independent (Norris of Nebraska) were counted by the administration as "sure" for the pending bill. Only 49 votes are needed for passage.

New Teachers are Guests and Entertainers at Faculty Party

"Star Makers" was the theme of the party given for the six new members of the Appleton High school faculty in the cafeteria Thursday evening, and the six were given opportunity to display their histrionic abilities.

As part of the initiation program, Miss Mary Lou Mitchell, English instructor, donned the garb of a duke; Miss Annabelle Wolf, English instructor, that of a king; Lawrence Witke, physical education instructor, that of a fair princess; Pete Briese, social science instructor, that of a queen. Miss Elsie Koppelin, Latin instructor, was the "curtain" and prompter in the drama of unrequited love, and John Mack, social science instructor, provided the sound effects. In addition, these quick change artists dramatized the current song favorite, "An Apple for the Teacher." Miss Koppelin was the stern school marm, while the rest of the initiates were her pupils.

The star motif was carried out at the dinner table with silver stars on which were pasted the pictures of instructors liberally sprinkled with those of Hollywood actors. Bill Pickett, physical education instructor, was master of ceremonies. Between courses the new instructors were honored with special songs and in turn delivered after dinner speeches.

In the final initiation ceremony, Pickett presided as judge and brought charges against the neophytes. Each took an oath to correct his ways, sang the alma mater, and received his official diploma of admission to the faculty of Appleton High school.

Decorations for the party were arranged by Miss Adela Klumb, head of the English department; Miss Sofia Nicolazzo, home arts instructor; and Miss Mary Baker, dean of girls. The refreshments were planned by Miss Alice Peterson, English instructor. The administrator would administer the codes, aided by advisory committees and deputies for each of the service industries.

Tax Workers Organize In Civil Service Move

Milwaukee—(AP)—Internal revenue workers from 16 states intent on having their work come under civil service, assembled today to adopt bylaws of the new National Association of Employees of Internal Revenue.

Oscar W. Ristau, provisional president and deputy collector in the Milwaukee office, said in explaining purposes of the organization that:

"It is to the detriment of both the public and the employee that these offices are political footballs, legitimate spoils of elections. It takes a year or more to train an employee in the technical work required and then his tenure is only just as long as the administration. These posts should be under civil service."

About 150 were present at preliminary sessions. Permanent officers will be elected tomorrow.

Seems that the other night a car owner came out to his machine, parked in the 200 block on N. Appleton street, to find hay in the front seat. Quite a bit of hay, in fact. Enough to keep a cow munching through the lunch hour. Some time later he heard an acquaintance complain of the same prank. And before long had heard several similar stories.

County Bar Group Asks for Federal Courts in Valley

Petition Judge Duffy to Hold Sessions at Oshkosh, Green Bay

Neenah — The Winnebago County Bar association adopted a resolution petitioning Federal District Judge F. Ryan Duffy to resume the holding of federal court in Oshkosh and Green Bay. The resolution was adopted at the first fall meeting of the association Thursday noon at the Valley Inn.

Winnebago county's three jurists, Circuit Judge Henry P. Hughes, County Judge D. E. McDonald and Municipal Judge S. J. Luchsinger, were named to represent the association at the memorial service for the late Federal Judge Ferdinand Geiger to be held in the federal courtroom at Milwaukee at 10 o'clock Monday morning.

The statutes call for the holding of federal court in Oshkosh on the second Tuesday in June and at Green Bay on the first Tuesday in April; however, no sessions of federal court have been held in either Oshkosh or Green Bay in more than a decade.

The reason for petitioning for federal court sessions in the Fox River valley, the lawyers contend, is that holding court at Milwaukee makes costs prohibitive for valley residents.

European History Embodied In War Outlined to Rotarians

Neenah — Neenah Rotarians received a short course in European history as it is embodied in the current European war at a noon meeting Thursday at the Valley Inn, and Miss Marie Hirsch, history instructor at Oshkosh State Teachers college, was the teacher.

Containing that the war is largely a conflict of psychology, Miss Hirsch said that "When I read Hitler's 'Mein Kampf,' I thought that Hitler was stupid, but after further study I reached the conclusion that he is just misguided."

Explaining the differences between scientific, economic, political, social, and cultural histories, the instructor briefly outlined the various phases of the war.

Race Not Pure

The instructor contradicted Hitler, contending there is no such thing as pure race stock in Germany. She pointed out that Germany once was a conglomeration of 300 principalities with constant Slav and Celtic migration through the country.

England developed the true parliamentary concept, while in France, the 2-party system was futile, and the Germans developed the superman concept. Nationalism in Germany came in Bismarck's time when the country was divided into 100 different states. The purpose of the superman concept was for unity.

Poland, on the other hand, started nationalism before Germany, but because there were whole Russian and German in Poland, because the Polish nobles couldn't get along and because the monarchy was elective, Poland deteriorated and soon was divided between Germany, Russia and Austria.

When asked what "normal" Poland consisted of, Miss Hirsch told the Rotarians that in areas, such as the corridor, the "people are Polish by name but German by what they think."

Pegler Says Newspaper Ethics Higher Than Those in Congress

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER

New York—Representative Ham Fish writes that he is amazed plus astonished, at his recent memoirs of a day, when, to hear him tell it, he was fixing to use, in a speech in his district, which includes the homes of President Roosevelt and the president's mother, two unconfirmed bits about those distinguished constituents.

These tips came in his fan mail, one to the effect that Mrs. James Roosevelt had received $35,000 from the federal government for the repairs and maintenance of her home at Hyde Park while the president used it as a summer home, the other that James Roosevelt, the president's late father, provided in his will that Franklin should have no hand in the management of the estate because it was his belief that the future president had no ability to handle money.

The latter report I later received from so many scattered sources that I investigated the will, on file at Poughkeepsie, and found that it was just one of those lies which take off into space and, in many cases, never are shot down. Anyone who wants to check this can do so, but the information about the maintenance of the house wasn't so easily come at—just then, anyway—for Fish himself, when he attempted to dip an ear into the congressional investigation of tax avoidance and evasion, had been told that he mustn't bring the president's tax return into question. So I never investigated and therefore never mentioned the one about the house either, and considered it to be out of bounds until Steve Early did a piece for the Saturday Evening Post in which he mentioned it to deny it.

Fish Says Columnists Are Careless With The Facts

All this is just overture to create a mood for Ham's say in reply to mine, which is that "the only basis of truth in your column is that I showed you some letters that were on my desk that had reached me on that day requesting me to look into these charges. I asked the ways and means committee for this information. I pride myself on the fact that I do not make statements carelessly and check every detail carefully before accepting the facts, as I know that anything that I might say that cannot be substantiated would weaken the balance of my argument. It seems that some of the columnists are much more careless with facts than men in public life, who know that the slightest deviation from the facts defeats the cause which they are upholding. In all fairness I would appreciate it if you would have my reply published in the newspapers that carry your column."

Mr. Fish is nice enough anyway, to suggest that my memory, not necessarily my honesty, is at fault, and adds that if my memory had been a little better I would recall that he said he didn't believe the charges but would ascertain the facts.

Now, this discussion arose from an admonition to the public delivered by Mr. Fish per radio to beware of unreliable war news which might be propaganda and my reply. I was doing a job of reporting, and my eye, ear and nose for legitimate material, as distinguished from trash, may be judged by the fact that I never touched either of the items that Mr. Fish had that day and, as I intend and he doesn't remember, pointed out to him that this matter, lacking any proof, was not permissible by newspaper standards. In general, I claim that newspaper standards are higher than those of congress, if for no other reason than our lack of immunity. I admit, however, that, as he says, "some of the columnists are much more careless with facts than men in public life," but only with a one-word amendment. I make it "some men in public life," but indorse his warning that news, and especially news pictures, may be tainted and conjure statesmen to observe in debate and in the record the same standards that they would require of American journalism.

Hitler Asks Peace But Says He Must Decide Poles' Fate

Declares Only Interest in Scandinavian Coun- tries Is Economic cerned demonstrations throughout Germany which coincided with his reichstag speech.

Hitler began speaking at 12:06 p. m. (3:06 a. m., C. S. T.).

Of the Polish operations he said, "German armies . . . covered distances and spaces for which the achievement of which more than 14 months would have been necessary 25 years ago."

The fuhrer renounced any further claim to territory with the exception of colonies but he said these claims were not made in the form of an ultimatum by force but that the demand was based on political justice.

The fuhrer made more or less specific proposals for the erection of a Polish state provided that it "not be a center of intrigue" against Germany and Russia, and settlement of eastern Europe's minority trouble, including some regime for Jews.

His proposed conference, Hitler said, must not be held under a threat of force.

During the first 20 minutes of his speech he described Germany's military successes in the war against Poland.

For the next 20 minutes he dwelt on the political side of the war in the east, bringing out Germany's friendship for Russia and asserting that Germany was not striving for world hegemony.

During the next 15 minutes, he discussed what he called his practical revision of the Versailles treaty, declaring what he had done was a happy event for all humanity.

He had revised the treaty bloodlessly, he said, with the exception of the last phase—a reference to the Polish war.

"That the last remnant of the Polish army was able to hold out in Warsaw, Modlin and Hela until October is attributable solely to our cool wisdom and feeling of responsibility," Hitler said.

"I had forbidden the sacrifice of more men than absolutely necessary. . . . Whatever it was absolutely essential to do was done without regard for sacrifices. What, however, could be avoided was left undone. . . .

"An attempt to persuade responsible Polish army leadership—insofar as there was any—concerning the purposelessness, yes, the madness of resistance, especially in a city of a million inhabitants, proved vain.

"The generalissimo who himself died in an inglorious manner compelled his country to a resistance which at best had to lead to its destruction.

(Marshal Edward Smigly-Rydz was Polish commander.)

"The city (Warsaw) was converted into a fortress. . . . The entire population was called upon to participate in the fight.

"Out of pity for women and children I offered those in charge at Warsaw at least to permit the civil population to depart. I offered a truce. . . . The proud Polish city commandant did not even deign to reply.

Military Objectives Only
"Bombers and heavy artillery were directed to attack only objects which were military beyond peradventure of a doubt."

Hitler then related the history of the various additional attempts to persuade Warsaw to surrender and his efforts to get foreigners out of the city.

I finally ordered the attack to begin Sept. 25," he said. "It (the city) capitulated. With 120,000 men, it did not dare to make a bold rally but preferred to down its arms. No comparison with the Alcazar (the siege of nationalists in a military citadel in the Spanish civil war) is in place here.

"The Polish soldier as an individual fought bravely in various places but his leadership, beginning from the top, can only be characterized as irresponsible, conscienceless and incompetent. . . .

"I make these assertions to anticipate the formulation of historic legends."

He narrated the plan of the Polish campaign, much along the lines of the German army high command's closing survey Sept. 23.

"Now that I am about to give you the number of our dead and wounded," he continued, "I ask you to rise.

Reports On Casualties
"Even if this number hardly totals a twentieth part of what we believed at the beginning of the campaign we might have to fear, yet let us not forget that everyone who gave his life made the greatest sacrifice that any man can make for his people."

"According to the casualty list of Sept. 30, which will not change materially, total losses for the army, navy and air force, including officers, was the following: 10,572 killed, 30,322 wounded and 3,404 missing."

an address lasting an hour and twenty minutes, Hitler coupled his suggestion for a general attempt to solve Europe's problems with a declaration that it could not be done "while cannons are thundering or mobilized armies are bringing pressure to bear upon it."

"If . . . these problems must be solved sooner or later," he said, "then it would be more sensible to tackle their solution before millions of men are first uselessly sent to death and billions in riches are destroyed."

Situation Must Change
"A continuation of the present state of affairs in the west is unthinkable. Each day will soon demand increasing sacrifices. . . .

He introduced the subject of a peace conference by saying that the "most important condition" for a "real revival of economic life in and outside of Europe is the establishment of unconditionally guaranteed peace and of a sense of security on the part of individual nations."

"This security," he added, "will not only be rendered possible by a final sanctioning of the European status, but above all by a reduction of armaments to a reasonable and economically tolerable level.

The essential part of this necessary sense of security, however, is a clear definition of the legitimate use and application of certain modern armaments which can at any given moment have such devastating effect on the pulsating life of every nation and hence create a permanent sense of insecurity. . . .

"I believe, however, that a sense of national security will not return to Europe until clear and binding international agreements have provided a comprehensive definition of the legitimate and illegitimate use of armaments.

Favors Regulation
". . . it must surely be possible to emulate the Red Cross and draw up some universally valid international regulation. It is only when this is achieved that peace can reign particularly in our densely populated continent—peace which, uncontaminated by suspicion of fear, will provide the only possible condition for real economic prosperity."

"To achieve this great end the leading nations of this continent will one day have to come together in order to draw up, accept and guarantee a statute on a comprehensive basis which will insure for them all a sense of security, of calm, in short of peace."

"Such conferences could not possibly be held without the most thorough preparation, that is, without exact elucidation of every point at issue. It is equally impossible that such a conference which is to determine the fate of this continent for many years to come could carry on its deliberations while cannons are thundering or mobilized armies are bringing pressure to bear upon it."

Referring then to the "unthinkable" state of affairs in the west, he added:

Widespread Conflict
"From both sides (eventually) destruction will strike deeper, deeper and whatever cannot be reached by long distance guns will be destroyed from the air. . . . The battle of destruction won't be confined to the land. No, it will reach far out over the sea."

"Today there are no longer any islands. And the national wealth of Europe will be scattered in form of shells, and the vigour of every nation will be sapped on the battlefields."

"One day, however, there will again be a frontier between Germany and France, but instead of flourishing towns there will be ruins and endless graveyards."

"Mr. Churchill (Britain's first lord of the admiralty) and his companions may interpret these opinions of mine as weakness or cowardice if they like. I need not occupy myself with what they think; I make these statements simply because it goes without saying that I wish to spare my own people this suffering."

"Last Statement"
"If, however, the opinions of Messrs. Churchill and followers shall prevail, this statement will have been my last. Then we shall fight. Neither force of arms nor lapse of time will conquer Germany. There never will be another November, 1918, in German history. It is infantile to hope for the dissolution of our people."

"Mr. Churchill may be convinced that Great Britain will win. I do not doubt for a single moment that Germany will be victorious. Destiny will decide who is right. One thing only is certain. In the course of world history there have never been two victors, but very often only losers. This seems to me to have been the case in the last war. May those peoples and their leaders who are of the same mind now make their reply. And let those who consider war to be a better solution reject my outstretched hand."

Hitler turned to Germany's new relations with Russia which, he said, grew out of the collapse of Poland.

Relations With Russia
"If this step on Germany's part (steps to liquidate Poland) has resulted in a community of interests with Russia," Hitler declared, "that is due not only to a similarity of problems affecting the two states but also to that conclusion which both states have arrived at with regards to their future relationships."

"In my speech at Danzig I already declared that Russia was organized on principles which differ from those held in Germany."

"However, since it became clear that Stalin saw nothing in these Russian soviet principles which should prevent him from cultivating friendly relations with states of different political creed, national socialist Germany sees no reason why it should adopt another criterion."

"The Soviet Union is the Soviet Union, national socialist Germany is national socialist Germany. But one thing is certain: From the moment when the two states agreed to respect each other's distinctive regime and principles, every reason for a mutually hostile attitude has disappeared."

Tracing then the past relations between Russia and Germany, Hitler added:

Traces Relations
"It is easy to understand that capitalist states of the west are interested today in playing off these two states and their principles against one another. For this purpose, and until it is realized, they would certainly regard the Soviet Union as a sufficiently respectable partner for conclusion of useful military pacts."

Hitler said the western states regard it as a "perfidy" because their approaches to Russia were rejected and, instead, a rapprochement between Germany and Russia resulted.

Then he labelled the German-Russian pact of friendship and mutual interests insurance "not only of peace but also of constant, satisfactory cooperation for both states."

"Germany and Russia together," he said, "will relieve one of the most acute danger spots of Europe of its threatening character, and will, each in her own sphere, contribute to the welfare of peoples living there, thus aiding European peace in general."

Hitler now was speaking at a very rapid rate.

He said the German-Russian agreement was the best refutation of assertions by "insolent journalists" that "Germany is aspiring to world domination."

He then outlined five "aims and tasks" resulting from the collapse of Poland "insofar as the German sphere of interests is concerned."

These, he said, were:

Hitler's Aims
1.—Demarcation of a German border which "will do justice to the historical, ethnological and economic facts."

2.—Pacification of the entire conquered territory "by restoring tolerable measures of peace and order."

3.—A guarantee of security for Germany and its entire sphere of interest;

4.—Re-establishment and reorganization of life, trade and transport;

5.—Establishment of a "new order of ethnographic conditions, that is to say, resettlement of nationalities."

Developing the fifth point, the fuhrer declared this was not a problem restricted only "to this particular sphere but a task with far wider implications, for the east and south of Europe is to a large extent filled with splinters of German nationality, whose existence cannot be maintained."

In the very existence of such splinters, he said, "lies the reason and cause for continual international disturbances. . . . It is, therefore, essential for a far-sighted ordering of the life of Europe that resettlement should be undertaken here so as to remove at least part of the material for European conflicts."

Germany and Soviet Russia will support each other in attaining this end, Hitler said and "never will allow a residual Polish state of the future to become a disturbing factor" for Germany or for good relations between Berlin and Moscow.

The fuhrer then launched into an analysis of the "methods of Versailles" and why they "proved an utter failure."

"Since the resurrection of the German people" through national socialism (Nazism), he declared, relations existing between Germany and surrounding nations have been cleared up to a great extent.

Blames Democracies
"The uncertainty that today is weighing down the common life of nations is not due to German demands," Hitler asserted, "but to malignant insinuations published in the so-called democracies."

"German demands themselves were formulated in a very clear and precise way."

"They have, it is true, found their fulfillment, no thanks to the insight of the league of nations but thanks to the dynamics of natural development."

"The aim of German foreign policy as pursued by me has, never been other than to guarantee the existence, that is to say, the life of the German people, to remove the injustice and nonsense contained in the treaty which not only destroyed Germany economically but has drawn victor nations into disaster as well."

Then Hitler expressed his conviction that it was "fortunate for humanity" that he had succeeded in removing the "craziest, most impossible" Versailles clauses without bloodshed in all cases but Poland and "without compromising foreign statesmen in the internal politics of their countries."

Hitler summarized under 10 points his efforts to "clear up relations between ourselves and our neighbors."

He mentioned non-aggression

pacts with the Baltic states and Germany's endeavors to establish and continue friendly relations with countries such as the Netherlands, Belgium, Switzerland, Yugoslavia, Hungary and Italy.

Tells of Efforts
He laid special stress on his efforts "to rid our relations with France of all trace of ill will and to render them tolerable for both nations. . . . The return of the Saar territory was one demand which I regarded as an indispensable precondition of a French-German understanding. After France herself had found a just solution to this problem, Germany had no further claims against France."

"No such claim exists any longer and no such claim shall ever be put forward."

Alsace-Lorraine, Hitler said, does not constitute a problem which could even interfere with French-German relations" because, he said, it was of "slight" importance to Germany.

"It is impossible for a French statesman to get up and declare that I have ever made any demands on France the fulfillment of which would have been incompatible with French honor or French interests," he maintained.

The Reichstag thundered with cheers when he added, "It is, however, true that instead of demands I have always expressed to France my desire to bury for ever our ancient enmity."

Sought British Friendship
Turning to Germany's other enemy in the west, Hitler declared he had devoted "no less effort" to achieve British-German friendship. He denied ever having acted contrary to British interests.

"Animosity on the part of certain British statesmen and journalists," he charged, had caused the failure of those endeavors.

Asserting that the aim of these men was "to seize the first opportunity in order to resume the fight with Germany," Hitler expressed belief that "there can only be real peace in Europe and throughout the world if Germany and England come to an understanding."

"Because of this conviction," he continued, "I have often shown the way to an understanding. If in the end there was not the desired result, it was not really my fault."

"Where Quality and Cleanliness Reign"

Grand Opening

SATURDAY OCT. 7

You are invited to attend our Grand Opening tomorrow. It will give you an opportunity to inspect our modern bakery with latest type equipment throughout. You will see for yourself how exact in meaning our slogan really is—

"WHERE QUALITY AND CLEANLINESS REIGN"

All our baking is done under the direct supervision of Mr. S. R. Sorensen. For 9 years he was employed as head pastry baker at the Elm Tree Bakery, Appleton.

Come in and see the wide selection of fine baked goods we offer. You will be pleased with our prices, too.

AIR CONDITIONED BAKING

Yes, air conditioned baking. Sounds funny doesn't it? Yet it is the best way we know of to express our new process, which explains why our coffee cakes, Danish pastries and other delicacies are richer, more delightful and fresher than ever. When we mix our sweet dough or batter, we don't rush it directly to the oven. Instead we place it in a very special type of cabinet to rest a while. The air in this cabinet, made moist and cool under exact, automatic control flows in gentle circulation around the batter. This treatment results in the very finest products we know of. It brings out all the rich flavor of the pure butter, milk and eggs we use. We will be glad to explain this process in detail when you make your visit here.

FREE DEMONSTRATION

Every visitor tomorrow will have an opportunity to sample some of our products. To complete the treat, the S. C. Shannon Co. has arranged to serve a hot cup of their delicious Quality Cup coffee to all guests starting at 9:30 A. M.

SPECIAL ORDERS

We are prepared to take care of special orders for fancy decorated cakes or special pastries for any occasion. Special decorations are done by Mr. Fred Sorensen, who formerly did this work at the Elm Tree. Call for complete information about this service.

FRIDAY'S GAME
Fond du Lac at Green Bay West.
Oshkosh at Sheboygan North.

SATURDAY'S GAME
Sheboygan Central at Appleton.

DESPITE a rather riddled lineup, there's no gloom hanging over the Appleton High school football camp as the squad prepares for Sheboygan Central here tomorrow afternoon at Whiting field. As a matter of fact, the morale of the squad is unusually good considering the Terrors have been kicked around twice in conference starts.

Two changes in the starting backfield and two more in the starting line have been decided upon by Coaches Myron Seims and John Mack, and they'll add that the boys really have looked good in practices.

The backfield changes will show Ralph Buesing—the fourth member of the family to cross the high school grid horizon—in the fullback slot and Charles Kleifoth in the tailback position. Both will be showing for the first time in starting positions. The other two backs will be Konz and Pegel, the latter playing wingback and doing the punting. Of the four, Pegel is the only boy who opened the season in the backfield.

The new line assignments will show Larson at end and Shinnars at guard. The latter replaces Junge, out with a couple cracked ribs. Reider will be at the other end and Koletzke at the other guard. The center will be held down by Crabb and the tackles will be Heinritz and Burton.

Brasch Reports
Ray Brasch was out for practice last night and reported his knee felt good. However, he may not see action so that he'll have three weeks to recuperate before the Fond du Lac game on Oct. 21. Marvin Fick also has been showing a lot of dash again and has almost recovered from his illness. His passing last night was rather accurate but he may not play until the coaches are certain he's all right. Allen Fraser will be missing entirely to give several pulled tendons a chance to get healed.

Sheboygan Central tied last week with Fond du Lac after dropping the season's opener to East Central. Has scored 19 points but had 33 scored against it. In a pre-conference game, Central downed Kenosha, 12 to 0. Reports are the invaders will have a big line and a veteran backfield.

Only three conference games are scheduled this week. The Appleton-Central game is the only one booked tomorrow, the others being tonight. Fond du Lac will be at Green Bay West and the contest may be a real struggle. Oshkosh goes to Sheboygan North and should run up a big score.

TRYING TO PICK football winners is a tough job at best but trying to pick them and write this column with a weather eye on the printers and the world series, that's even worse. It's Thursday afternoon and the Reds haven't gotten a hit yet and we've always been an American league and Yankee fan. So, if the picks are unusually screwy this week blame it on the ball game.

Appleton-Central—There is no indication that the Terrors will have any better luck than in the last two games.

Lawrence-Coe—A really tough game to pick this week. Coe will be primed to avenge last year, Lawrence has to take the trip and play on a foreign grid. So far the Vikes have shown a strong line but their pass defense is a question. Their running is spotty and we haven't much faith in their passes. We're just a wee bit afraid that—

Fond du Lac-West: This may be a real battle but there's no reason to believe that Fondy has the stuff to win. West.

Oshkosh-Sheboygan North: The Indians should have another field day for North isn't as strong as Central which Oshkosh mauled.

Wisconsin-Texas: The Badgers were not so good last week. They have the stuff on paper. Somehow we feel they'll come roaring back to win.

Kaukauna-Shawano: It's for the championship of the Northeastern Wisconsin conference. If the Kaws can smother Billy Reed as they did a year ago—If Giordana and his pals can score—If—if—if—we'll take the Kaws.

Neenah-New London: Looks like a close one. On the flip of a coin, New London.

Menasha-Clintonville: A disappointing Menasha team may crash through. But, look out, the Truckers are hungry and they've missed by inches a couple times this season.

Pulaski-Marion: Looks like Marion will have to wait a year or two.

Kimberly-Onton: They say a couple Kimberly stars won't play but we don't believe them. The Papermakers are getting better with every start. Kimberly.

St. John-St. Catherine: We don't know a thing about St. Catherine, but St. John's backfield has been wrecked by injuries. It looks like St. Catherine.

Menasha St. Mary's-Edgewood, Madison: The Menashans are due to cop.

Carroll-St. Norbert: The unfortunate accident at Carroll no doubt will have its effects on the team. It may also goad the team on to a win. At any rate, we'll take Carroll.

Beloit-Carlton: The Gold beat Chicago last week but it probably was "high." It can't do the same thing in two weeks and Carlton really looks like the goods. Carlton.

Ripon-Knox: Your guess is as good as mine. Ripon has some excellent backs, it is said, and it usually has a line. Ripon and hope.

Holy Cross-Louisiana State: L. S. U. will be no pushover but we'll take Holy Cross.

Northwestern-Oklahoma: Northwestern may take the wraps off Bill de Correvont in this one. Oklahoma has the advantage of an early start but, first game or no first game, Northwestern gets the nod.

Notre Dame - Georgia Tech: The Ramblers weren't exactly a ball of fire against Purdue but the talent and the manpower is there. Notre Dame.

Fordham-Alabama: One of the toughest of them all, and only by the toss of a coin is Fordham the choice.

Tulane-Auburn: The Green

Wave barely washed past Clemson and this one looks just as tough. Still, Tulane.

California-St. Mary's: The grapevine says Slip Madigan has a good ball club at St. Mary's this year. California supposedly had too but that defeat by College of Pacific in the second game of a double-header creates at least a slight element of doubt. St. Mary's.

Cornell-Syracuse: This corner takes a flier on Cornell.

Duke-Colgate: Even had Colgate not taken a bad physical beating at the hands of New York University last week, the choice would be Duke.

Yale-Columbia: Taking Columbia but not with any particular degree of comfort.

Temple-Carnegie Tech: No reason yet to believe that Carnegie isn't one of the east's really strong teams. Tech.

Army-Centre: Army, handily.

Navy-Virginia: This may be awful close but we'll go down (if absolutely necessary) with the Navy.

Iowa-Indiana: A sheer guess. Iowa.

Nebraska-Minnesota: The Huskers didn't seem to have much of an attack against Indiana and the choice is Minnesota.

Ohio State-Missouri: Picking up where we left off last year. Paul Christman makes Missouri dangerous but Ohio State gets the nod.

Michigan - Michigan State: If State has another Johnny Pingel we haven't heard about it yet. Therefore, Michigan.

Vanderbilt-Kentucky: Out of the hat, Vanderbilt.

Florida - Mississippi State: State.

Clemson-North Carolina State: Close but Clemson.

Kansas State - Marquette: Marquette, strictly unguaranteed.

Arkansas-Texas Christian: Both already upset. Like T.C.U. but not by much.

Pitt-West Virginia: Taking Pitt.

Oregon-Stanford: Oregon State one week, Oregon the next. Putting together last week's results (all-ways dangerous practice), Oregon.

TWIN CITIES GRIDDERS ON LAWRENCE SQUAD

These three husky lads are the Neenah-Menasha representation on the Lawrence college football squad which will play its annual homecoming game with Carlton college of Northfield, Minn., Saturday, Oct. 14, at Whiting field. Standing at the left is Harold Borenz, Menasha, lanky center, playing his first season of ball, and right, Dave Spalding, Menasha, another sophomore, who performs in the backfield. The chap in the center is Al Starfeld, Neenah, still another first year performer, who gives indications of playing a lot of tackle before the season is over. (Post-Crescent Photo)

Fall track has supplanted cross country at Lawrence college, it was announced by Coach Arthur C. Denney, and approximately 20 boys are taking advantage of the warm afternoons to get workouts.

Most of the boys are freshmen and several performed on high school squads in this section last year. Among them are Jim Fieweg, Kimberly, who is working on the hurdles and the high jump; Phil Knell, Manitowish, a half miler; Art Duperrault, Green Bay West, a hurdler; Robert Noble, one-time of Green Bay East, also a hurdler; and George Kuehl, Appleton, a quarter miler.

Ralph Colvin, Appleton, a sophomore is working on the mile run. He ran the half and the quarter in high school but Coach Denney believes he may find the longer distance much easier.

THIS WEEK'S GAMES

Saturday
Beloit at Carlton

Lawrence at Coe

Ripon at Knox

Cornell at Culver-Stockton

Monmouth at Carthage

LAURENCE college football squad, 1938 champion of the Midwest conference, will make its first league start of the current season Saturday afternoon, against Coe college at Cedar Rapids, Ia. The game also will be Coe's first league exhibition although the Kohawks already have played two hard games.

Coe is reported to have a veteran line and a new backfield, except for the left half position which is held down by one Ed Cislser, half a ball team in himself. Five of the seven men in the line played against Lawrence here last year when the Vikes got a touchdown and then staged a couple valiant goal line stands. On one they gave Coe two points on a safety and the game ended 6 to 2.

Lawrence has worked hard since its win over Northern State Teachers last Saturday and although it will have power there's still a lot to be desired. The offense doesn't click so well for lack of blocking although Buesing and Nencki may break away any time. Some of the sophomore linemen are ragged in assignments and there isn't the forward pass threat of a year ago.

Beloit At Carlton

Two other conference games are carded tomorrow. Beloit, fresh and cocky after a win over Chicago last Saturday, goes up to Carlton for a homecoming game. The Carls are reported to have one of the best teams in years and that probably means a great game.

In the other conference contest, Ripon goes to Knox. Very little has come out of the Redmen's camp but everyone knows Coach Carl Doehling has a fine backfield and he invariably comes up with a big line. Knox opened last week when it defeated Simpson which team also lost to Beloit.

The other conference schools in action are playing non-league opponents. They are, Grinnell at Drake, Cornell at Culver-Stockton and Monmouth at Carthage.

EBY SHIFTS BACKS

Cedar Rapids, Ia.—A backfield change in the lineup for Coe's first conference game of the season Saturday was in prospect as Coach Moray L. Eby tried a sophomore, Ray Johnson, at the important quarterback post instead of Harley Moore injured last Saturday.

Moore suffered a bruised hand, serious enough to affect his work in practice but not considered severe enough to keep him out of Saturday's game with the 1938 Midwest conference champions, the Lawrence Vikes.

Ed Cislser, who has felt at home this season in the fullback position, will be switched to left halfback, and Henry Moss, another sophomore, will begin at the fullback post. Walt Kinch will remain at the right halfback position.

Line changes for the contest include substitution of Vernon Elsager at left end for Don Martin and Art Hass at left guard for Roy Roughton. Elsager is a senior, Hass a junior.

Backfield substitutes include Harold Block, quarterback; and Robert Wideman, fullback. Following the game tonight the Bluejays will have two weeks in which to prepare for their next contest, the final home game of the season which will be against West DePere on Oct. 20.

Several Injured
Two of the regular starters of the Bluejay team are on the injured list. They are Gene Grode, co-captain and end, and Robert Nantke, blocking back. Both have injured shoulders. Nantke probably will not start but may get into some action while Grode most likely will be kept on the sidelines throughout the game. Kenneth Wolff, center and the other co-captain, was unable to play in the Shawano game because of illness.

Other players on the squad going to Clintonville tonight are Norman Drexler, Jack Noel, Billy Woodhead and Eugene Resch, tackle.

Yankees 2-Up In Series Play

Resume Feud With Reds Tomorrow Afternoon In Cincinnati

BY GAYLE TALBOT
NEW YORK (AP)—The Cincinnati Reds are a brave lot of boys. When they left here last night, bound for home and a resumption of the world series against the Yankees tomorrow, they were yelling belligerently: "We'll be back."

A full appreciation of this stout-hearted, devil-may-care attitude on the part of the National league champions can be had only by the 118,000 who sat in Yankee Stadium for the past two afternoons and watched the lads from the west absorb two of the cruellest beatings ever dealt out by the Yanks or any other club.

Beaten by Red Ruffing, 2 to 1, in the opener, and shut out by Monte Pearson's marvelous two-hit pitching yesterday, 4 to 0, the Reds might have been forgiven had they refused to continue the classic unless they were given a head-start of, say, three runs per game.

But in their dressing room and on the cars last night they were insisting — "We'll be back" — and Manager Bill McKechnie was railing: "Nobody can tell me we are as poor a ball club as we've looked the last two days. Tell 'em we're coming home with our heads up."

Can't Be That Bad
At that the Reds cannot be quite that bad, even granting that they were up against almost phenomenal pitching. Few clubs in any kind of series, ever were mowed down so mercilessly as they have been for two days.

In two games they have made just six hits, all singles. Only one Redleg, Ival Goodman, has reached second base, and he scored their lone run in the first game after drawing a walk. Of the three who saw first after sampling Pearson's deceptive fast ball yesterday, two on clean hits and another on a pass, none went any further.

When Ernie Lombardi plunked his single to center in the eighth yesterday he broke a string of 12 consecutive innings in which the Reds had failed to scratch any sort of a hit had been retired in order by Ruffing and Pearson.

The crowded stadium was pulling for Pearson to get his no-batter when Lombardi caught an outside curve squarely on the nose and shot it over second base. After the spell had been broken it didn't matter so much that Bill Werber notched another hit after two were out in the ninth. Pearson, the 30-year-old veteran from Oakland, Calif., had pitched one of the classic games of world series history.

Curve Baffled
The Reds said it was his fast ball, rather than his sweeping curve, that baffled them. He struck out eight, center fielder Harry Craft going down three times swinging from his heels.

Bucky Walters, like Paul Derringer before him, turned in a good job of chunking for the Reds. Of the nine hits pounded by the Yanks, five came in one big frame, the third. The Yankees were set down in order for the last three innings. Walters struck out five and owned to only one serious mistake—the fast ball that Babe Dahlgren whipped into the left-field stands in the fourth inning.

"The pitch shouldn't have been quite where it was," grinned Walters in a fine piece of understatement.

It is just like the Yanks that the weakest hitting regular on their side. Dahlgren should have been the batting hero of the first two games. In six official times up he has blasted a home run and two doubles, a record that even Lou Gehrig, the man he succeeded at first base, might not have bettered. He drove across the Yankees' tying run in the opening game, scored their first run yesterday after doubling to open the third frame and then hit his four-bagger in the fourth.

Keller Hits Hard
Charley Keller, the rookie right-fielder whose triple in the ninth practically broke up the opening contest, came back with a double during the Yankees' big third inning yesterday, and his single in the fifth was the only blow off Walters in the last four chapters.

The best Joe DiMaggio managed in four trials yesterday was a lucky infield hit. Once he hit weakly into a double play.

Both teams were scheduled to work out today at Crosley field in Cincinnati, site of the next three games. McKechnie is sticking with his original choice of Junior Thompson, rookie right-hander, to try to stop the Yanks tomorrow. Joe McCarthy will put off the announcement of his choice, which was believed to lie between Oral Hildebrand and Bumie Hadley.

The Reds will not have to face either Ruffing or Pearson again for a couple of days, Joe promised.

HE'S SINGING A VICTORY SONG
Monte Pearson had a big grin and a loud song when he got to the showerroom in the New York Yankee dressing room after he got shut out the Cincinnati Reds in the second game of the World Series on two hits. Pearson pitched no-hit ball for seven and a third innings.

Cincinnati in Gloom but Fans Haven't Given Up Hope

BY FRITZ HOWELL
CINCINNATI, OHIO (AP)—Cincinnati's Reds, their pair of pitching aces beaten by a flush of Yankee clubs in the first two games of the world series, come home today.

The prides of the Buckeye Rhineland had a day of leisure before they and they hoped the lay-off would bring an end to those white spots which have been dancing before their eyes before plunking into the catching mitt of Bill Dickey.

The gloom that pervaded Mudville the day the mighty Casey struck out was a bright and shining light compared with the pall that hung over this Ohio river metropolis as fans surveyed the task the Redlegs had before them.

"We had a chance to beat 'em in four out of seven," was the consensus of the boys in the taverns, hotel lobbies and on the street corners. "but can we beat 'em in four of the next five?"

"We've come from behind before," Manager Bill McKechnie said after yesterday's game, "and we'll do it again. We haven't lost this series yet, and I don't think we will."

The fans have strung along with the dour deacon all year without being disappointed, and most of them are waiting for wait for tomorrow's result before tossing in the sponge.

Fans arranged a parade through the business section for the Redleg team.

FAST MOVER
Cincinnati (AP)—Willard Hershberger is more active than most catchers because he is little enough to move quickly and because he was once a second baseman and therefore learned a lot about foot-work.

Clintonville Hi Hopes Tonight Will See 1st Win

Truckers Oppose Menasha Bluejays Under Clints' Lights

CLINTONVILLE — Clintonville High school football team's next bid for a conference victory will come this evening when the Menasha Bluejays invade the local stronghold in a Northeastern conference game. Both the Bluejays and the Clints have been defeated in their first two conference games. Menasha has bowed to Kaukauna and Shawano by top heavy scores while Clintonville has gone down fighting by small margins to New London and West De Pere. Last year the Bluejays managed to sneak through with a 13 to 0 win over practically the same Clintonville team it will meet this evening.

Last Friday the Clints turned in one of their finest exhibitions in several years against West De Pere but were on the short end of a 13 to 7 count. Art Zemske, shifty Clintonville back, went over for the Clints' first touchdown of the season and then dropkicked the extra point. Tonight, however, Zemske will not see much action suffering a recurrence of a leg injury last Friday which kept him on the bench for several games last season.

Clintonville looked bad on pass defense last week and Coach Arthur E. Johnson has been drilling his boys on this item all week. The Clints' line showed up well against West De Pere and is stronger than in several seasons.

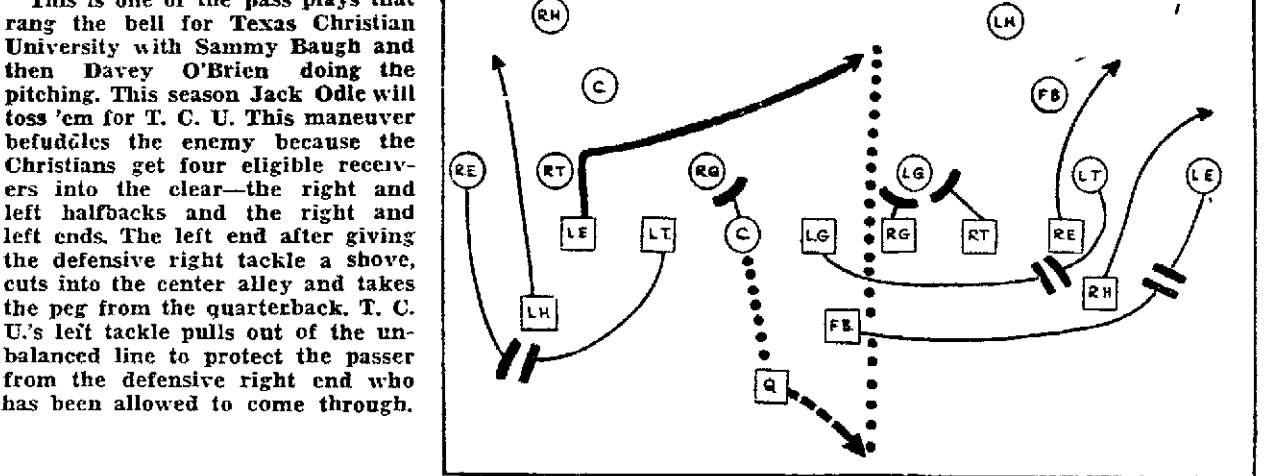

Coach Johnson also has expressed praise for his backfield which has turned in two good games. Five boys have been making up the bulk of the backfield this year including Jim Breed and Art Zemske at the halves, Jim Billmeyer at quarterback, and Jim Werner and Gus Burdick at full. Burdick didn't see much action in the first game against New London because of a back injury.

Breed is a discovery in the backfield doing most of the kicking and passing and more than doing his share carrying the ball. Last year Breed was the manager of the squad.

This season Clintonville is blessed with several capable reserves and Friday night Coach Johnson plans on giving several a chance. Among the linemen who may see action are Bill Manser and Floyd Heubner, tackles, Russ Shannon and Bud Zuch guards, Gib Roepke and Myril Korb ends, and Rheindold Kiel at center. The backs are Brent Gieb, quarterback, Ray Kautz and Harvey Neundorff at halves, and Hunky Bodah at full.

This is one of the pass plays that rang the bell for Texas Christian University with Sammy Baugh and then Davey O'Brien doing the pitching. This season Jack Odle will toss 'em for T. C. U. This maneuver befuddles the enemy because the Christians get four eligible receivers into the clear—the right and left halfbacks and the right and left ends. The left end after giving the defensive right tackle a shove, cuts into the center alley and takes the peg from the quarterback. T. C. U.'s left tackle pulls out of the unbalanced line to protect the passer from the defensive right end who has been allowed to come through.

Packers Hope to Recover Prestige

Defeat at Hands of Cleveland Last Sunday Still Ranks

Green Bay — Green Bay, will attempt to recover the football prestige it lost last week when the Packers journey to Milwaukee to meet the Chicago Cardinals for the second time this season. The National Football league game will start at 2 p. m. at State Fair park.

The Packers were upset by the Cleveland Rams last Sunday and it was a thoroughly aroused squad that went through spirited workouts under the direction of Coach Curly Lambeau and his assistant, Red Smith, daily this week. Two rookies were released as Lambeau continued to iron out weak spots, and one new player was added.

Drop 2 Players

The men let go were Francis Twedell guard from the University of Minnesota and Frank Steen, end from Rice Institute. Added to the roster was Jimmy Lawrence, former Texas Christian teammate of Sammy Baugh and lately a member of the Chicago Cardinals. Lawrence left the Cards after a shake-up under Coach Ernie Nevers and probably will see action against his former mates at Milwaukee Sunday.

Elsewhere, the Packer lineup for Sunday is unchanged. More work at all departments was the key to this week's drills, with some special attention given to blocking. Coach Lambeau was particularly dissatisfied with blocking against the Rams.

Losing to the Rams does not eliminate the Packers from the National league title race by any standard, but in a nip and tuck battle losing another game might put Green Bay gridders at a serious disadvantage. Green Bay now is tied for second in the Western division with two won and one lost.

Big Ten Teams Will Get Tests in Tomorrow's Games

CHICAGO (AP)—Although it will be Indiana and Iowa who are blasting open the Big Ten football season tomorrow, attention of most conference critics will be on Northwestern, Michigan and Ohio State.

The three, catalogued among the foremost championship threats this season, begin their seasons against formidable non-conference opposition.

The experts had their title suspicions regarding two other contenders—Minnesota and Purdue—confirmed last week, and a week hence can compare their paper form against fact when the two meet at Minnesota.

Tomorrow, however, Northwestern goes on the spot against Oklahoma, Michigan against Michigan State and Ohio State against Missouri—all on home gridirons. Other Big Ten eleven in action will be Wisconsin, against Texas; Minnesota against Nebraska, and Chicago against Wabash. Minnesota's game is at Lincoln.

On the spot with Northwestern

LaCrosse, Eau Claire Teachers Meet Tonight

La Crosse (AP)—Coach Clyde Smith's La Crosse Teachers college Indians start their campaign for the Northern division football title here under the floodlights tonight against the Eau Claire Teachers.

The Indians have had two weeks of hard work since they lost their opening non-conference tilt to Platteville, 21 to 7, but will be without the services of three veterans.

The Chicago Bears have the same record to date. The division is paced by Detroit which has won three.

Paskvan to Start For Wisconsin in Tomorrow's Game

Claude York Appears to Have Edged Out Fred Gage as Quarter

MADISON—Coach Harry Stuhldreher, absent since the University of Wisconsin football team squeezed out a 14-13 victory over Marquette, returned to Camp Randall yesterday and directed final preparations for tomorrow's intercollegiate clash with the Texas Longhorns.

"They looked a little better," he said following a brisk workout.

The Badger coach had been away three days attending the funeral of his father at Massillon, O.

He announced George Paskvan, junior fullback, would be able to play against the Texans despite a hand injury, but indicated that Bob Peterson, sophomore, probably would get the starting assignment.

Tony Gradinski, elusive left halfback, who suffered a bruised hip in the Marquette game, returned the first string in yesterday's dummy scrimmage and signal drill.

Doyle is lost. Stuhldreher said Johnny Doyle, reserve center, would not be able to play for a week at least. Doyle hurt his leg in the season's opener with the Hilltoppers.

Claude York appeared to have clinched the first team starting assignment at quarter, edging out Fred Gage. With Peterson at fullback and Gradinski at left half, York carrying quarter probably will have Billy Schmitz at right half.

Linemen apparently assured of starting berths were Ray Kreick and Al Lorenz, ends; Al Dorsch and Bob Eckl, tackles; Bob Holloway and Dick Embick, guards, and Jack Murray, center.

The second team included: Johnny Tennant or Bob Cone, left half; Bob Miller, right half; Paskvan, fullback; Gage, quarter; John Lochke and Gordon Gil, ends; Harry Fagerstrom and Rex John, tackles; Orville Fox and Don Kolbusz, guards, and Orville Fisher, center.

A marching contest by 12 Wisconsin high school bands and the presence of some 10,000 high school students was expected to add color to the game. The Texans, who started over Florida last weekend, will arrive shortly before the game time after an overnight stop at Janesville.

TEXAS WORRIED

Austin, Tex.—A squad of 35 University of Texas Longhorns, far from confident of a victory over the Wisconsin University Badgers whom they will face Saturday, left yesterday for Madison.

Weakened somewhat by the loss of fullback Pete Ladden, injured in Texas' 12-0 win over Florida, the Steers were hoping that sophomore Jack Crain would be in shape to start the Badger contest. Crain suffered a back injury in Wednesday's scrimmage.

ANGLES ON DUCK SHOOTING

By Harold Hollis

DUCKS never have been trained so that they always follow a fixed program in coming in on the hunter. They may come in high and drop down rapidly; they may circle and look the situation over carefully. They may come from behind, from in front, or from the side.

Getting the proper lead on birds coming in from high overhead is a technique most of us have found difficult to learn. Such shots should be as easy as falling off a log, but they often don't work out that way. Have always advocated a swinging lead for the best results on an overhead shot.

The gun should start behind the duck and catch up with him. Instead of passing the duck as in crossing shots the shot should be made the instant the duck is hidden by the gun barrel. After the system of swinging is successful on a shot repetition of the same method will bring a creditable showing.

If a bird comes winging in straight at you you should also cover him with the barrel and fire. If he is coming in below your eye level you should hold low and be certain that you are leading him by a foot or more depending upon the distance he is away.

Use Same Care on Flock as Singles. If a sizeable flock of birds is coming over you you will get the best results by putting in at least two shots before they reach you.

This cannot always be done, and sometimes it is necessary to blaze away with shots after the ducks have passed by. If the bird is going out overhead make certain that you see him over the muzzle of the gun before pulling the trigger. Make the top of his bill the mark.

If the bird is going straight away from you and approximately on your own level, always shoot over him. It is true that he can't fly as fast as your shot will travel, but he is out there in front with a head start.

Hunters who often do dwell on singles get rattled or flustered when a flock comes along. They probably don't concentrate and use the same amount of care in making their shots as in the case of singles. They just blaze away as speedily as possible and consequently lose accuracy. A good plan is to single out one bird and shoot at him no matter how many birds are in range.

After that bird is down pick out another and let him be the target. (This department will gladly answer questions on the outdoors provided a stamped, self-addressed envelope is enclosed for reply.)

BADGER BRIEFS

Gile—End

(Editor's Note: This is another of a series of articles on University of Wisconsin football players.)

BY DAVE ROWE

Madison—The University of Wisconsin football team has an end who can swim as well as he can play football. He is Gordie Gile, winner of the state championship in the high school 100 and 220 yard free style events for four years.

At Shorewood High school he captained the mermen, the football squad, both champions of the Suburban conference, and the track squad. He was key man on the relay swim team which was rated second nationally. He played tackle on the grid squad.

Gile, a junior in the Commerce school, stands 6 feet 2 inches and weighs 195 pounds. He has another year of competition after the coming season.

Last year he scored the lone tally against Pittsburgh, when he caught a 35 yard pass in the last 10 minutes of the game.

He excels in blocking, the first requisite of an end in the Notre Dame style of play. He is equally strong on defense and can hold his own with the pass snatchers.

Last year, his first on the Badger squad, he proved his durability, playing in more than half of every game. He spent the summer as a life guard.

With the exception of Larry Jarisky, left halfback, the veteran Milwaukee lineup will be intact. WIAA Offers New Tournament Plan

Membership Being Poll-ed; Ballots Must be Returned by Oct. 25

Marquette—The Wisconsin Intercollegiate Athletic association is polling its member high schools on a referendum on whether to continue the present regional and state basketball tournament system, with its three classifications, or substitute a new plan which would culminate in a single state tourney.

For the last four years, high schools have been divided into classes A, B and C, according to enrollment. District and regional meets have determined entrants in the state tournaments, with the exception of Class A schools, which have gone directly into the state tourney.

Paul F. Neverman, W. I. A. A. secretary, said the new proposals were modeled after a plan used in Illinois.

As a starter, 32 district meets, limited to schools with enrollments of 210 or less, and with schools of 200 or less having the first opportunity to enter, would qualify 32 winners for entry into regional meets, of which there would be 16.

Two district winners would be assigned to each regional tournament, the other six places in each meet being open to schools with enrollments greater than 210.

The regional winners then would compete in the state tourney. A deadline of Oct. 25 has been set for return of the ballots, and the annual W. I. A. A. meeting will be held in Milwaukee Nov. 2.

In another referendum, the schools will decide whether to place all sports—except boxing, wrestling, football and basketball—on the same summer recreational activity basis as baseball, permitting high school athletes to engage in additional sports during the summer vacation.

The annual state cross country run will be held in county park, South Milwaukee, Nov. 3, in two classes, A and B, with an enrollment of 500 as the dividing line.

Hilltops Ready For Kansas State

Ray Apolskis, Veteran Center, to Play, According to Driscoll

Milwaukee—Marquette will be shooting at its first football victory over Kansas State since 1936 when the Wildcats invade Hilltop stadium tonight.

Approximately 10,000 fans were expected to take in Marquette's home opener. Marquette has won five of eight games with the Wildcats, but has been blanked the last two years.

Coach Paddy Driscoll planned to start three sophomores who were not in the opening lineup against Wisconsin last week, although all saw action. They are Jimmy Richardson and Walter Leis, halfbacks, and Doug Renzel, fullback.

Driscoll said Ray Apolskis, veteran center who suffered an injury earlier in the week, would be able to play against the Wildcats. Steve Sesskowski was groomed as his understudy.

W. Fry, coach of the Big Six conference team, brought an array of veterans featuring Elmer Hackney, 205-pound fullback, who is rated a contender for all-America honors.

Colonels Win Little World Series Honors

Rochester, N. Y.—It took a long time, but the Louisville Colonels of the American association are baseball's little world champions for 1939.

After a series of postponements, the Colonels battled their international league rivals, the Rochester Red Wings, 11 innings last night before winning, four games to three.

Louisville, managed by Bill Burwell, who pitched Indianapolis to a little world series triumph over Rochester 10 years ago, scored four runs in the 11th to gain their 7 to 3 verdict.

Movieland Its People and Products

Olivia de Havilland was born in Tokio, Japan, and at the age of three was taken to Hawaii by her parents, and eventually to Saratoga, California, where she attended Las Gatos Union High School and Notre Dame Convent. She won a scholarship for Mills College in Berkeley, but before she could get there, the unexpected intervened. She was playing Puck in a school production of "A Midsummer Night's Dream" when a talent scout of Professor Max Reinhardt got her a chance to understand the role of Hermia in Reinhardt's Rose Bowl production of the same play. She did so well that she was chosen for the same part in the Warner Bros. screen version. Among the many pictures that have been graced by her presence since are "Captain Blood," "Anthony Adverse," "The Charge of the Light Brigade," "The Adventures of Robin Hood" and "Dodge City." She will be seen next as Lady Penelope Gray in "The Private Lives of Elizabeth and Essex" with Bette Davis and Errol Flynn.

Hollywood — A friend of Virginia Field, commenting today on her recent birthday party, happened to mention her age. Just 22! And I've been thinking, ever since, what a spot our Hollywood young-stars are on.

There are several dozen of them—some well-knowns as Anita Louise, Richard Greene, Nancy Kelly, Brenda Joyce, Ann Rutherford, Lana Turner, Priscilla Lane, Arleen Whelan, Anne Shirley—some in their late teens. And because fame has spotlighted them so prominently, it's almost impossible to think of them as being what they are — just kids. If they were college students, we would expect them to be a bit dizzy, rattle-brained and irresponsible. Being what they are, we are inconsistent enough to expect them to display mature poise and judgment under any and all circumstances.

As a matter of fact, an eighteen or nineteen year old movie star's equilibrium is subjected to many strains the college kid never meets. Large earnings automatically entail large responsibilities. Fan adulation and attention from the press are dangerous diets for the ego. And too much leisure, even though it comes at rare intervals, is an invitation to folly.

Considering everything, I think our very young celebrities are a remarkable group. Now and then one of them gets out of line, of course, but on the whole, they display a maturity of judgment that is amazing.

IDOL CHATTER: Amazing how many screen greals have names with an Irish tang. There's something very flickerish about Dolores del Rio's latest fashion do—painting her costume jewelry with phosphorus to make it glow at night. THE HOLLYWOOD PARADE: Warren William, inventor: So fascinated is Mr. William by anything mechanical that he has been known to overlook the near-nude beauties at Earl Carroll's nite spot, in studying the machinery which lifts them to the stage.

Bonfire Marks Start of Kimberly Homecoming

Kimberly—A huge bonfire as part of the homecoming celebration by the high school students was set off at 7 o'clock Thursday evening in the vacant lot behind the school. Gathered around the fire were about two hundred students and the school band.

The band played several marches while students sang the lyrics during the celebration. After the fire was burned out, the students formed a snake dance through the village and Little Chute. At 9 o'clock Friday afternoon a pep talk is scheduled at school which will be followed by the homecoming parade. In the evening Kimberly will play Omro, after which a dance will be held at the high school auditorium.

Western Front Saw Desperate Fighting as World War Went Into 10th Week 25 Years Ago

BY VIOLA HELLEMAN

Desperate fighting continued on the western front as the World War of 1914-1918 went into its tenth week, and toward the end of the week the allies became alarmed as the French and British columns found themselves unable to check the German offensive.

Appleton residents read in their two daily newspapers 25 years ago this week that the situation in France was causing great anxiety in London military circles, that the German offensive against the allied left wing continued with increasing violence and that more German troops were coming from southern Belgium to reinforce the line.

The week also brought more news from the eastern front than at almost any time since the beginning of the war.

"Four gigantic battles and two fort bombardments, involving fully six million men, are in progress in the eastern theater of war today," said a report which came from Vienna Oct. 1, 1914. The following day three distinct victories by the Russians in Russian Poland were reported to the Russian embassy in Washington and the Austrian cabinet, in anticipation of the impending siege of Vienna, decided to move the capital from Vienna to Prague.

Von Hindenburg was also on the eastern front.

Although reports early in the week said the Germans were retreating, a Russian statement on Oct. 5 declared that the Germans were resuming the offensive just inside the Russian frontier. Two days later a German report said that the Russians had been thrown back with heavy losses.

Agrees to Pay

Other news of interest that week was that Austria, in an effort to prevent Italy from declaring war, had agreed to pay an indemnity to the Italian government for the families of the fishermen lost when their boats were destroyed by striking floating mines in the Adriatic sea. Reports current in official circles also declared that Austria would remove the mines.

Portugal was believed to be on the point of entering the war on the side of the allies.

Everywhere in Germany, a story from that country reported, there was surprise at the success of German cruisers, for Germans had feared they would be easy victims to overwhelming force.

On Oct. 7, however, it was reported that the German cruiser

Cormoran and two German gunboats were sunk in a Japanese bay. Other news stories during the week informed readers that Turkey had summoned five gun boats to Constantinople in view of the growing tension caused by the presence of British warships in Turkish waters; that more than 60,000 refugees from northern Belgium had entered Antwerp; and that a German airplane shelled Rheims, killing 14 persons.

Emil Rocco, 81, Dies At Residence of Son

Clintonville—Emil Rocco, 81, for many years a resident of the town of Matteson, died Wednesday at the home of his son, Edward Rocco, east of Clintonville. He had been in failing health for a long time.

Born in Germany Dec. 9, 1857, he came to America as a young boy. After his marriage in 1884, he lived on a farm in the town of Bear Creek for 13 years. Forty-two years ago the Rocco family moved to the town of Matteson, where Mrs. Rocco died in 1938.

Survivors are three sons and two daughters, William and August Rocco of the town of Larrabee; Edward of Matteson; Mrs. John Bockhaus of Larrabee and Mrs. Clayton Case of this city.

The body is at the Eberhardt funeral home, where services will be conducted at 1:30 Saturday afternoon. The funeral cortege will go to Embarras, where services will be held at 2 o'clock in Zion Lutheran church with the Rev. Walter List in charge. Burial will take place in the parish cemetery.

3 States Will Hold Library Meeting at Milwaukee Oct. 18-21

The Michigan, Minnesota and Wisconsin Library association will meet in Milwaukee Oct. 18-21, according to an announcement received today by Mrs. Nancy B. Thomas, Appleton librarian.

Rural social problems and their implication for the librarian will be the topic at the meeting. Several members of the Appleton library board are planning to attend the trustee's dinner Wednesday night, Oct. 18, at the Schroeder hotel in Milwaukee, one of the convention highlights.

The first session will open at 8:45 Wednesday evening with Miss Martha B. Merrill, Superior, state president, presiding. Mrs. Thomas is state vice president.

Board of Control Stocked Up Before Food Prices Rose

Proceed With Plans to Open Oregon Industrial Girls School

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau
Madison—The state board of control several months ago anticipated the rise in commodity prices which resulted from war demands and laid in an inventory of supplies sufficient to last until well into 1940. Frank Klode, veteran businessman and chairman of the board, revealed today.

Klode pointed out that even a slight rise in the prices of such food staples as flour and sugar is extremely important to an administrative agency responsible for the maintenance of thousands of state charges in 17 state institutions throughout the state.

The probability of a boom in food prices was especially alarming, he pointed out, because budgets for the institutions have been stringently cut this year under the budget of the Heil administration.

Will Open School
The official said that the board has already begun work preparatory to the occupancy of the partially completed and long idle new industrial school for girls at Oregon. The legislature recently authorized expenditure of $300,000 to complete the institution to the extent that it can be used. When the work is finished, the old and frequently condemned school in Milwaukee will be abandoned, he said.

He also revealed that work will be begun immediately on the construction of a new cell-block at the over-crowded state prison at Wapuna and a new prison hospital which previous board of control officials have repeatedly requested. Such improvements were also authorized by the legislature this week with the appropriation of $275,000 from the prison's revolving fund.

The sum represents a part of the accrued profit of the prison's binding twine plant and other factory enterprises, and thus does not come from the tax funds of the state treasury.

Meetings are Held by Wapuna Church Guilds

Wapuna—St. Agnes Guild met with Mrs. Ralph Fabricius Tuesday afternoon at the summer home of Mrs. Chris Mortenson on Sunset lake. A dessert was followed by a business meeting with discussion stressing the Christmas sale. After a short time spent sewing articles for the sale four tables of auction were in play. High honors were won by Mrs. Claude Penney and second high by Mrs. P. J. Christoferson.

St. Mark's Guild of the Episcopal church also met Tuesday afternoon, at the rectory. Plans were concluded for a rummage sale to be held in the Guild Hall Oct. 21.

Mrs. Charles Nelson was hostess to the Baptist Union at her home Tuesday afternoon. Co-hostesses were Mesdames Elsie Hanley, James Erickson, Donald Grogan and Alfred Behnke.

Mrs. Sherman Salverson was in charge of the missionary program and Miss Carolyn Peterson, case worker of the county pension department, in charge of the civics program of the society, explained the work in the dependent children's aid.

County Board to Convene Nov. 14

New Budget Will be Set Up and County Officials Elected

Outagamie county supervisors will convene November 14 for their annual fall session at the courthouse. The budget for next year will be set.

Among the highlights of the session will be the election of a county highway commissioner and highway committee. Arnold Krueger was named commissioner for a one-year term by the board last year, defeating Frank Appleton, who held the job for a number of years. Other elections will include the naming of a county service officer, relief director and county physician. A trustee for the county sanatorium will be named to succeed Dr. Robert McCarthy, whose term expires this year. A trustee also will be named for the county asylum to succeed Henry Brandt, whose

Leonard Seybold Is Awarded Certificate By Dairy Association

Forest Junction—A herd improvement registry certificate from the Holstein-Friesian association of America, Brattleboro, Vt., dated Sept. 28, 1939, was received this week by Leonard Seybold, route 1, dairy farmer. The certificate was issued on a production record for the year ending July 31, and indicates that 16 registered Holsteins in the herd produced enough milk in 308 days to supply a town of about 500 inhabitants for one year.

Each cow in the test averaged 30,696 pounds of milk and 407 pounds of butterfat testing 3.8 per cent. Highest cow in the herd was Cherrybold Erskine Colantha 2519579, producing 14,578 pounds of term expires this year. Three persons will be named to the Outagamie County Safety council to succeed Joseph Doerfler, Les Smith and John R. Riedl, whose term expires this year.

Annual reports also will be heard at the session which will continue about eight or ten days.
